EFFECT OF TV PROGRAM

The success of the college's television program, "The Life of Jesus," taught by Dr. James A. Weber '29 over WISH (channel 8) at 7:30 a.m. on Mondays and Fridays, cannot be measured alone by the number of persons who registered to audit the course or take it for credit.

Nor can it even be measured accurately by the responses it has evoked by mail, telephone or in person -- but these are a definite indication of the educational contribution, spiritual inspiration and wide impact of Professor Weber's interpretation of the gospel message.

Actually only three viewers paid the required fees to take the course for credit, but about a hundred others paid a smaller charge to audit the course, which entitled them to a study outline. Obviously many of these have obtained the textbook and are doing their own studying.

But countless more people within viewing range of WISH-TV are following the program without any preparation on their own part, and many of them have reported to Dr. Weber the blessings and benefits it has brought them.

On Easter Sunday he met a couple who told him they had started attending church again after the wife had listened to him on "The Life of Jesus." An arthritic wrote that she had lost all hope until she saw his program, and that she had followed it faithfully and was doing the outside study for her own benefit and not for college credit.

Others who have been concerned about the mental health of members of their families have reported feeling uplifted after hearing Dr. Weber's television lectures. When he fills speaking engagements and goes other places it is quite common for people to greet him with compliments on his telecasts, and many in his audiences recognize him through having seen and heard him on the air. At one dinner where he spoke one of the women working in the kitchen who couldn't even see him remarked readily and enthusiastically: "Oh, that's the man I watch on television!"

For a professional entertainer fan mail and other contacts with his public may be a direct indication of his popularity at the moment, but for an ordained minister-college Bible teacher such responses have a much deeper significance: They are an indication of the educational and spiritual contribution he is able to make to the lives of those who are tuned in both literally and spiritually.

The television station reported that a survey on one specific day showed that 7,500 sets were tuned in to "The Life of Jesus." At the same time on another station 16,000 sets were tuned in to Dave Garroway's "Today" program. Yet this more than 2-1 ratio in favor of Garroway certainly does not mean that he is making twice as significant a contribution to society as Indiana Central's religious television program.

On the contrary, it is quite apparent that Dr. Weber's lectures have a many times greater impact.

HENRY M. TAYLOR

Henry M. Taylor, Dr. St. Clair's student assistant in history last year, has been awarded a Purdue General Electric Fellowship for graduate work in economics during the summer session. PRESIDENT’S LETTER

Every loyal Alumnus will want to come back for Alumni Day and Commencement this year to get a close up view of the changes in campus landscape. It just doesn’t look the same. With new buildings going up and old ones coming down the changes are quite noticeable. You really have to see them to appreciate them. We hope that you can come back to see for yourself because we know you will be pleased and proud and will thoroughly enjoy the fellowship of the Commencement week end.

We have had a good year and feel that we have made some real advancement. We have reached the half way mark in the campus development program with the two new buildings. The second half is of equal importance and we hope to move forward with it also. We expect to replace the old heating plant this summer. This is a first step in preparation for renovation of old buildings. The total rehabilitation program will be carried out as funds become available.

We have also had a good year in areas that cannot be measured in buildings or dollars. The new Nursing Department, the new Curriculum for persons who want to work in the area of Christian Education, and the advancement in the Evening Division and Industrial Relations Center programs are some examples. But most important is the development which takes place in the lives of these hundreds of young people that you can’t see or measure. This is what really counts. As I looked at this year’s seniors in a group the other morning and remembered them four short years ago as freshmen, this entire matter of personal growth and development was brought vividly to mind.

It is a great work in which we are engaged. It is wonderful to be a part of the Indiana Central family. It is a growing family in which every member, old or new, can take genuine pride. We will be looking for you back on Alumni Day.

You are just as important as any one of the other more than 5,000 alumni.

SECOND SEMESTER ENROLLMENT

Indiana Central College reported the usual midyear drop in enrollment of fulltime day students for the second semester, but the Evening Division continued its upswing.

Night classes are being attended by 434 students. There were 356 in this category in the first semester last fall, and a year ago there were only 210 entering the second semester evening courses. The Evening Division has recorded a steady growth each term.

Dropouts for various reasons always produce lower college enrollments of day students in the second semester. The total this semester is 692. This compares with 752 last fall and 632 the second semester of last year.

Men outnumber women, 408 to 284, in the day classes. There are 258 freshmen, 172 sophomores, 135 juniors, 110 seniors, and 17 special students.

IRENE JORDAN GIVES RECITAL

The fourth number of Indiana Central's 1959-1960 Artist Series was given on March 7 by Irene Jordan, Metropolitan Opera Soprano. Miss Jordan is beautiful and gracious, and her program was varied enough to suit the taste of everyone. Her first number, the famous "Alleluia" by Mozart, captured her audience and held them though numbers from such well known composers as Liszt, Verdi, and Ravel to the simpler songs such as "In the Silence of the Night" by Rachmaninoff. All in all, the evening was one of pure enjoyment.

Miss Jordan will return to Indianapolis next year to sing "Tales from Hoffman" with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra at the Murat under the baton of Izler Solomon.

Harold S. Harvey, '48, in March was made principal of an elementary school in Connersville. Mrs. Charlene Isom Hopkins, '55, is the first grade teacher in the same building. In addition to her husband, she leaves a daughter, her mother, and a sister.

FROM WEST TO EAST

The Rev. John M. Larsen, '48, after five years in the Far West at Everitt, Washington, is now pastor of an Evangelical United Brethren Church in Grand Island, New York. Mrs. Larsen is the former Kathleen Shipley, x49. They have four little girls: Kathry, Roberta, Cynthia, and Laura.

WHAT SOME ALUMNI ARE DOING

Helen White Hawkey, '34, of Greenville, Ohio, a music major of Central, has been busy through the years with her major. After doing some private teaching, she took post-graduate work at Earlham College and did practice teaching at Indiana State. She began her public school teaching at Palestine, Ohio, teaching all grades in music, high school orchestra and band, and four classes in English. (What a load for a beginner!) After four years she was elected County Supervisor of Vocal Music in Erie County, Ohio, with her office in Sandusky.

In 1942 she was married to Lowell Hawkey. While her daughter Joyce, born August 17, 1945, was small she taught private lessons again. When Joyce entered school, her mother went back to public school teaching and is now devoting her time to junior high vocal and instrumental music in two schools with six hundred children.

Helen and her husband are also busy in the EUB Church at New Madison, where she teaches an adult class and he is a trustee.

(It is no wonder that she did not find it possible to attend her 25th anniversary last June.)

Excerpts from a letter from Ruth (Randall) Berndt, x39, 4123 Lombard, Duluth 4, Minn.: "The ALUMNI NEWS is one paper that is read thoroughly from cover to cover. I have been active in the choir, missionary circles, and Sunday School of the First Presbyterian Church in Duluth for the past ten years. I am also a member of the Carillon Choral Club and am employed as a junior accountant in a Certified Public Accountants firm. Have one son, Victor, 16 years old. Would enjoy hearing from old friends and classmates."

George Harold Maass, '34, 701 W. Bremer Avenue, Waverly, Ia., after 21 years of association with the J. D. Adams Mfg. Co. at Indianapolis and then with their successor, LeTourneau-Westinghouse Co. of Peoria, III., is now Assistant General Sales Manager of the Schield Bantam Company of Waverly, Iowa.

His son has graduated from the junior college, Lincoln College at Lincoln, Illinois, and gone on to complete his education.

Central came up with its most successful wrestling team in history. The matmen finished with a 5-2 mark. They were also the Little State champions.

The most successful wrestler on the squad this year was Dan Welliver, a junior, with a 9-2 record. Willie Martin (7-2-1) and Jim Ramsey (8-3) were Little State champions in their weight divisions.

friends who are in the neighborhood of Waverly to visit him.

Clarence E. Wolfe, ’34, M. A. ’56, Memphis State University, is still in the service of the government as this excerpt from his letter shows:

“Working for the government has the drawback of causing one to become somewhat of a gypsy. My work has taken us from Louisville, to New Mexico, to Memphis, and now to Baltimore. However we are in a new home, my son Ralph is in the large Mergenthaler Vocational Technical High School, and my work as Chief, Educational Therapy, in teaching hospitalized veterans here, as I have done elsewhere, is well under way in this one of the newest of the Veterans Administration hospital system.”

In sending her life membership dues Florence Estermann Bender of 1367 Blvd. Way, Walnut Creek, Calif., writes:

“I do so much enjoy getting the news about the good friends from Central. If I lived closer to Indiana I certainly would be a frequent visitor to the college and participate in some of the activities. I have greatly missed the association of all the good people I met while there. Some day I sincerely hope to visit the campus again and renew friendships made in the early thirties.”

(It may be of interest to know that Florence went from Central to the Oakland UB Church as a deaconess. This church was President Esch’s first pastorate, He and Mrs. Esch welcomed Florence to her first field as a deaconess. As a hobby Florence and her husband raise orchids, Now they have some 2,000 plants.)
