Thought Provoking Drama Given

On three nights, March 10, 11, and 12, an unusual thought provoking drama was presented in Ransburg Auditorium. The best criticism can be given by quoting the column from Charles Staff, the theater critic of the INDIANAPOLIS NEWS, written after the first performance:

"Theater, like love and gold, is where you find it.

"Tonight and tomorrow evening, it can be found at Indiana Central with Professor Lawrence Fisher's production of Samuel Beckett's startling "Waiting for Godot," which opened in Ransburg Auditorium last night.

"The two-act 'tragi-comedy' is one of the most discussed and least understood plays of the last decade or so. Like a complex abstract painting or a piece of music by Pierre Boulez, one cannot hope to get it all the first time around.

"While Beckett undoubtedly planted concrete ideas and concepts in every word, action and reaction, the play, nevertheless, can engage the viewer on whatever level he chooses, or not at all. The over-all theme, however, appears to be man's unhappy but ridiculous state. He waits, filling up the hours with trivia, unable to get too close to the others around him who are also waiting, all the while vaguely clinging to a hope that the answer will come, if, indeed, there is one.

"Fisher's black-and-white set, sense of movement, cinematic character touches, feel for the fantastic and the handling of his students are brilliant. "Except for a certain stridency in delivery and forced quality in pacing, only occasionally, the four young men, Lynn Kinkade, James Ellars, Jack Caster and Thomas Tozer, perform as if they not only understood precisely what their director wanted but also exactly what Beckett meant. A talented youngster, Gary Burris, rounds out the cast."

Indiana Central to Seek Top High School Seniors

Indiana Central College has announced plans for a program which would invite superior Indianapolis area high school seniors to take a course at the college as a form of "educational stimulation."

Although the college-credit program would be open to seniors from all city high schools, it could be expected to draw mostly from Shortridge High School because of the high-standard academic curriculum the school assumes in the fall, ICC officials said.

ICC President Esch said the creation of an all—city college preparatory program at Shortridge stimulated the proposal.

Harry A. McGuff, president of the Indianapolis Board of School Commissioners and head of the ICC Evening Division, said an informal poll of School Board members disclosed approval of such a program.

No formal action would be taken by the board, however, until complete details of the program, such as qualifications, schedules and fees are arranged, McGuff said.

"This could not start before the fall of 1967, and probably not even then, because of the great amount of planning needed," Dr. Esch pointed out.

Dr. Esch said the pupils, probably 100 to 200 a semester, would have to pay their expenses, approximately $85 a course. However, a partial scholarship arrangement will be discussed in the planning, he added.

The high school pupils could attend classes with college freshmen, or be enrolled in several groups of exceptional seniors. This would depend on the schedule worked out, Dr. Esch continued.

The seniors would attend classes on the college campus. "This has the two-fold advantage of providing the campus atmosphere, intellectual and social, and making college facilities, such as the library, available," Dr. Esch said. The pupils would get credit and, perhaps have a semester of college attendance later, he noted.

He added that this type of program has an advantage over programs in which superior pupils enter college full-time after the junior year of high school.

Too often, he said, the senior year for the bright pupil is boring and little more than a repetition of material from the first three years.

Wayne E. Babler, a 1935 alumnus of Indiana Central, will be the speaker for the sixty-first annual commencement June 5. Mr. Babler, a University of Michigan Law School graduate, 1938, attended Otterbein College one year before coming to Indiana Central in 1933. While attending the University of Michigan he was a member of the Order of the Coif and editor of the Michigan Law Review. After several years of private practice and teaching of law, he joined the legal staff of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New York City, where he worked principally on the first Federal Communication cases relating to the development of television. In 1965 he was appointed General Solicitor of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in 1963 was elected Vice President and General Counselor of Wisconsin Telephone Company, Milwaukee, Wis., and in 1955 was elected Vice President and General Counselor of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company in St. Louis, a position which he now holds.

He is a member of Missouri, Michigan, New York and Wisconsin Bars, a member of the Board of Directors of St. Louis Society for Crippled Children and a member of St. Peters Episcopal Church. Wayne's wife is the former Mary Blome. They have three children.

The Louis Schwitzer Center, to be dedicated April 30, 1966, is designed to be the center of student non-academic life at Indiana Central College. It was made possible by a gift from Louis Schwitzer, Indianapolis industrialist.

The center contains:

Main (first) floor: High-ceiling dining room seating 600; faculty dining room and adjacent lounge, three other small dining rooms separated by folding doors; rooms for 12 overnight guests; meditation chapel seating 75; large foyer-lounge area with fireplaces near both entrances to the building.

Ground level: Bookstore; post office; self-service snack shop; recreation room; concourse where students can rest or study, which can be converted into a ballroom; six conference rooms, five of them connected by folding doors; an alumni lounge adjacent to the alumni offices; and offices for the student government, student publications, the deans of students, director of development, and director of public relations.

Upper (second) floor: Three large conference rooms which can be enlarged by opening folding doors, with fire places in the two end rooms; three smaller connecting conference rooms; and a kitchenette.

College Science Honorary National Meeting Held

Sigma Zeta, national science honorary fraternity, held its annual national convention at Indiana Central College Thursday through Saturday, March 31-April 2.

Delegates and chapter sponsors had a social gathering Thursday night after registering. During the convention several students presented scientific papers.

The opening session Friday included a business meeting, and in the afternoon the young scientists visited Allison's Powerama. Dr. Robert Kryter, Indianapolis chemical engineer, was the main speaker at the banquet Friday evening. His subject was "The Challenge of the Space Age."

The convention ended after another business session and the presentation of student papers Saturday morning.

Richard Rodebaugh is president of Indiana Central's chapter of Sigma Zeta, and Dr. Robert M. Brooker, chairman of the division of Science and Mathematics, is sponsor.

The papers presented by ICC students included "Spectro-chemical Consideration of the Principle of Continuity of States," by Rodebaugh; "The Albino Factor in Mice," by Judy M. Nicholson; and "The Function of a Siphon in a Vacuum," by Susan Merrick. All three Indiana Central students are Indianapolis seniors.
Angus Nicoson Elected President

Angus Nicoson, director of athletics and head basketball coach at Indiana Central College, was elected president of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics at its business meeting in Kansas City March 11.

He had just completed a year as first vice president and has been a member of the NAIA executive committee for several years.

As a student at Indiana Central, "Nick" became one of its great athletes of all time. Five years after his graduation in 1942 he returned to his alma mater as basketball coach and again made an enviable record.

At Central he earned a bachelor of science degree in physical education and social studies after compiling a fabulous college athletic record. He was named to the all-state basketball team one year and the all-conference team two years. In his senior year he captained the Greyhound basketball team which won 16 consecutive games and was ranked fifth in the Midwest and ninth in the United States. That same year he was captain of the baseball team also.

Upon graduation from Indiana Central he became basketball coach and athletic director at suburban Franklin Central High School. His eagers won 98 games and lost 28 for a .766 average. The school, then known as Franklin Township, won the 1945-46 and 1946-47 Marion County championships, and it was Capital District champion in 1944-45, 1945-46 and 1946-47.

In the fall of 1947 he returned to Indiana Central as basketball coach and physical education instructor. Two years later he became director of athletics as well. He still is head hardwood and track coach and athletic director, and associate professor of physical education and chairman of the Department of Health and Physical Education.

Nick's Greyhound coaching record at the end of the 1965-66 basketball season (not counting the team's elimination in the NAIA tournament at Kansas City March 8) was 331 games won and 162 lost for a percentage of 67.3.

Nicoson's Greyhounds have been in 12 District 21 playoffs for the right to represent Indiana in the NAIA national tournament, and they advanced to the championship meet at Kansas City four of those seasons.

His basketball teams have won the Hoosier College Conference title seven times and placed second eight times since the league was formed in 1947-48. Central's athletes, under Nick's tenure, won the HCC all-sports trophy eight years, placed second six other times, and never finished lower than third place.

In his early years of coaching at Indiana Central Nicoson also directed football teams which won the conference championship twice. The baseball team has earned six HCC titles under Nick's athletic directorship.

Many honors have come to Nick. They include his selection for 14 consecutive years to coach the Indiana High School All-Stars who play a similar Kentucky team each June in a basketball charity series. He has been voted Hoosier Conference basketball coach of the year seven times, and he was the first person to be honored as coach of the year by NAIA District 21, in 1963-64.

Master's Program Ready

The curriculum for the master's degree program is now ready and waiting for approval by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Though inspectors from the Association will be on the campus sometime during the month of May, it is not expected that this accrediting agency will meet before August 1. Even then some changes may be made in the curriculum.

This is a master's degree program designed primarily to meet the needs of students seeking to fulfill the requirements for permanent professional certification in the state of Indiana on the elementary level. As it is now planned, it is designed for the needs of classroom teachers.

A sheet giving full information is being sent to all ICC alumni holding a bachelor's degree and living within a radius of 50 miles of Indianapolis. Any one desiring further information, either within or without the radius of 50 miles, should write to:

Special Training Program For Professional Youth Leaders To Be Inaugurated

A new program designed to train young people for professional youth leadership will be inaugurated at Indiana Central College this fall in cooperation with the American Humanities Foundation.

Indiana Central is the fourth college in the United States and the first in a metropolis to be selected by the foundation to offer such a program. The others are Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Missouri; Salem College, Salem, West Virginia; and High Point College, High Point, North Carolina.

Young people selected to enroll in the program will take basic courses in liberal arts, sociology and psychology and also receive special training in such areas as social work, administration of social agencies, group dynamics, inter-group relations, community welfare organizations, financing social agencies, institutional relationships, child and adolescent development, social group work theory and practice, field methods and statistics, public relations, recreational and camp leadership, rural and urban sociology, and social psychology.

Graduates of the foundation's program already are serving as professional staff personnel in Boy and Girl Scouts, YMCA, YWCA, Boys' Clubs, Camp Fire Girls, Junior Achievement, 4H, probation work, corrective institutions, rehabilitation, children's hospitals, church youth camps, and public park recreation.

The foundation supplies faculty and underwrites an accompanying program of field trips and professional relationships. It also gives loan fund assistance to upper classmen who cannot complete college without such help. The four-year program leads to a bachelor of arts degree. Dr. Robert E. Cramer, academic dean of Indiana Central College, said in commenting on the establishment of the new humanities program:

"The program of the American Humanities Foundation fulfills an important need in our society. We need professionally trained, ethically sensitive, and socially dedicated young men and women to assume roles of leadership in the various voluntary youth organizations of America. The course of study for this program is excellent. It calls for a liberal arts core as well as a major in human relations. We feel honored that Indiana Central has been selected as one of the few schools to offer this course."

Professor Ross Ludwig has been appointed to direct the program and joined the Indiana Central faculty on April 1. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in health and physical education and a master of arts degree in education administration, both from West Virginia University. He will direct preparation for starting this new program in September. Since 1931 Ludwig has been working with youth in various ways, as high school teacher and coach, as juvenile probation officer and as Boy Scout director for 19 years. During World War II he spent four years in the Army, being discharged as a lieutenant colonel.

Taken From Indianapolis Goodwill News

"Miss Mary Ellen Grace exemplifies the spirit of workers who rehabilitate themselves at Goodwill with the facilities provided by the public . . . people who ask, 'not charity, but a change.' Miss Grace supervises the material collection department where you often hear her friendly voice when you telephone for a Goodwill truck.

"You don't cry today . . . tomorrow . . . or ever . . . because you have been sentenced to a life in a wheel chair. You enjoy the good things and count the blessings they bring you.

"Miss Grace has been selected as Indianapolis Goodwill Worker of the Year for 1966. It is an honor bestowed on that person who has done the most to overcome his (or her) handicap on his own.

"She had completed two years of teacher training at Indiana Central College, (from which she graduated in 1937), was on a regular job at Indiana Bell Telephone Company, when—in 1944—she was stricken with polio.

"She came to Goodwill on her own and said she was willing to take any kind of job assignment . . .

"Through various jobs, although handicapped herself, from her wheel chair she trains other people for a useful life."

Wide Variety in College's Annual Fine Arts Event

Four musical programs, an illustrated lecture on art, three one-act plays and an art exhibit constituted the varied events in the 11th annual Fine Arts Festival at Indiana Central College.

The festival opened Sunday, March 27, and ended Saturday, April 2, except for the recent paintings by Martha Slaymaker of Indianapolis, which were on display in the Art Gallery through Friday, April 22.

The paintings were on display in the Art Gallery in the Leah Ransburg Fine Arts Center of the Administration Building.

Students of the Music Department gave a recital at a convocation in Ransburg Auditorium at 9:35 a.m. Monday, March 28, and at 8 that evening the Symphonic Ensemble, conducted by Lowell Bouroughs, chairman of the department, with soprano Miriam Ramaker as soloist, performed. Miss Ann Abbinanti, curator of education at Herron Art Museum and art critic of the Indianapolis Observer and Courier, gave a lecture with colored slides at Wednesday's 9:35 convocation. Her subject: "Your Generation and an Old Frank Sinatra Song."

At 8 p.m. Wednesday, also in the auditorium, the Indianapolis Civic Orchestra presented a concert with Mrs. Dorothy Munger, assistant professor of music at Indiana Central and pianist for the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, at the piano. The orchestra is composed of campus and community musicians and is directed by Professor Bouroughs. The Wind Ensemble played again Friday morning at convocation, at 9:35 a.m., in the auditorium.

An Evening with Edward Albee closed the festival at 8:30 p.m. Saturday when three one-act plays were presented by the Department of Speech and Drama and directed by Lawrence F. Fisher, an assistant professor. Students appeared in "The Zoo Story," "The Death of Bessie Smith" and "The Sandbox."

All of the events during the festival were open to the public and all were free except Saturday night.

After 15 years of service to the Trueblood Memorial Church of Decatur, Illinois, he has been since 1964 pastor of Robinson First Church, Robinson, Illinois.

Virgil has served and is serving as chairman and member of church and civic committees too numerous to write in the space allowed.

After spending 18 years as pastor of three churches, he was elected to the office mentioned above and which he now holds.

He is married to the former Lois E. Fulton, x46, Indiana Central. In the family are five children: Elizabeth, now a sophomore at Indiana Central; David, who will attend ICC this fall; Katherine, a sophomore at Syracuse High School; Norman, a freshman at Syracuse; and Rebecca, 8th grader in Syracuse Junior High.

College Raises Fees for Room and Board

Indiana Central College has announced an increase of $25 a semester for room and board, effective next September, but added that tuition would remain unchanged.

The room charge was increased from $125 to $135 and the board cost from $290 to $215 for a combined total of $350 a semester or $700 for a year. Tuition remains at $500 a semester or $1,000 a year.

The tuition covers 12 to 17 hours of credit, most course fees, health services, health and accident insurance, and other miscellaneous items.

Leo S. Miller, business manager, who announced the new rate schedule, said the cost of attending Indiana Central was “still quite modest when compared with other colleges and universities around the state.”

Miller added that the college would be able to expand its student aid program next fall.

78 IC Students in Supervised Teaching

Seventy-eight Indiana Central College seniors are engaged in supervised teaching in Indianapolis and nearby schools this semester. Twenty-one of them are in elementary schools and 57 in high schools.

One semester of teaching in an accredited school under an approved supervising teacher is required to qualify for a teachers’ license after graduation from college.

An Evening With Edward Albee

The finale of the 11th annual Fine Arts Festival led the audience into the theater April 2, 1966 at Indiana Central College. An Evening with Edward Albee perhaps can best be described in the author's words as "the unusual, the unlikely, and the unexpected."

The first three one-act plays of Albee were presented by the Indiana Central Players. An evening of stirring educational theater, "The Zoo Story," "The Death of Bessie Smith," and "The Sandbox" proved to be an excellent climax to the week's activity on Central's campus. The combination of these three plays is an education in itself. Although they are not directly related there is much continuity from one to the other. Because they are about life and death and the human situation in between, they treat the same general theme. Further continuity is Albee's experimental technique.

In "The Zoo Story," for instance, he abstracts the element of communication and the middle class complacency which he sees as a wall to the sensitive person who tries to understand and be understood. "The Death of Bessie Smith," although centering on a severe racial problem and a study of racial attitudes, is even more exciting as a technique of trying to see how much exposition can be obtained by implication. Through eight rapid scenes, the audience concentrates on a character that never makes an appearance on stage.

A totally abstracted approach to theater is seen in "The Sandbox." It is an attempt on the part of the playwright to shock an audience into a brief study of a prevalent attitude toward the proper way of death. The last of the three dramas is a brief, 14-minute play in memory of his grandmother.

"The Zoo Story" featured Joseph D. Huse as Jerry and Jack L. Caster as Peter. Cast in "The Death of Bessie Smith" were Robert Coleman as Bernie, Thomas Tozer as Jack, Dixie Evans as a nurse, Lynn Kinkade as an orderly, Barbara Bean, a second nurse, and Thomas Williams as an intern.

A cast of five—Huse as the Young Man, Sue Merrick as Mommy, James Williamson as Daddy, Sharon Bitzer as Grandma and Alice French as the Musician, appeared in "The Sandbox."

Directed by Lawrence F. Fisher, An Evening with Edward Albee was presented at 8:30 p.m. in Ransburg Auditorium. Mr. Fisher is associate professor of drama and speech at ICC.

Evening Division Has Enrollment Hike in Spring Semester

Harry McGuff, director of the Evening Division at Indiana Central College, has announced that 1242 students are enrolled for classes in the spring semester.

The largest single area of enrollment is business and economics, with an increase of 10 percent over the spring of 1965. Science and mathematics, now the second largest area of study, gained by a phenomenal 30 per cent. Third on the list is held by the area of English language and literature. McGuff said the increase in enrollment stems largely from the greater emphasis being placed on education by the business community. Larger high school graduating classes, increased interest in adult education plus new and expanded facilities at Indiana Central have also contributed to the gain in enrollment.

The most stimulating factor, however, may well be the practice of various business firms of providing a tuition refund program for their employees, McGuff stated. When a course is completed successfully the employee is reimbursed for all or a portion of the tuition fee.

Said McGuff: "Such programs serve not only to strengthen the employee, but also to provide the company with a more qualified workforce. This is a good indication of the value of education as a measure of success."

Davis Goes to Ohio State Department of Education

Chester L. Davis, class of 1947, has been since 1964 in the Audio-visual Education Division at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

On April 1, 1966 he became Educational Consultant in the Division of Instructional Materials with the State Department of Education, state of Ohio.

The family will be moving from Oxford to Columbus, Ohio about July 1, 1966.

We Apologize

We do make mistakes but try to correct them when they are brought to our attention. Another contributor to the 1964-65 Roll Call was left off the annual report.

Mrs. Mary F. (Hermann) Gillespie should have been listed under the class of '58.

We shall try to do better next time.
Four to Receive Honorary Degrees at Indiana Central Building Dedication

Four honorary degrees will be conferred at the dedication of the new Louis Schwitzer Center at Indiana Central College on Saturday, April 30.

The ceremony will be held in Ransburg Auditorium of Academic Hall at 2 p.m., after an invitational luncheon in the spacious main dining room of the new building, which will be the center of much of the non-academic activities of students.

Louis Schwitzer (pronunciation: short i as in Switzerland), Indianapolis industrialist whose generosity made the Center possible, will be honored with a doctor of laws degree.

A retired veteran of the Indiana Central faculty, Miss Virginia Cramer, will receive a doctor of humanities degree. Doctor of laws degrees will be conferred also upon a historian and teacher, Dr. Donald F. Carmony, and an Indianapolis lawyer, Harry T. Ice.

Four students will voice the appreciation of their associates instead of having a visiting speaker for the occasion. They are Stephen Maple of Speedy, retiring president of the Central Council, the student government of the campus; Mrs. Marydee Meyer West, formerly of Corydon but now of Indianapolis; Miss Michelle (Mickey) Stoneburner of Indianapolis; and sophomore Gregory Michael of Hartford City. Dr. I. Lynd Esch, president of the college will preside and offer the invocation. The college’s Concert Choir will sing, and Miss D. Colleen Johnson, assistant professor of music, will be at the organ console.

Dr. L. L. Huffman of Dayton, Ohio, chairman of the board of trustees of the college, will conduct the ritual of dedication, and the dedicatory prayer will be spoken by Dr. Robert W. Koenig of Terre Haute, an Evangelical United Brethren Church conference superintendent. Dr. Koenig is a former minister of the University Heights EUB Church, and on July 1 he will become executive secretary of the Church Federation of Greater Indianapolis.

After the benediction by Dr. Robert E. Cramer, academic dean of the college, there will be an open house and reception in the new $1,250,000 center, with tours for visitors.

Mr. Schwitzer, whose name the Center will perpetuate, founded the Schwitzer Corporation, which manufactures precision products for the automotive industry, after World War I. He came to the United States from his native Austria before the war, in which he served on the engineering staff of the Motor Transport Corporation.

As a young man Schwitzer was interested in automobile and motorboat racing. He participated in the first 500-mile race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway in 1911, as well as earlier and shorter contests on the then new track. He became a member of the Speedway’s technical committee in 1912 and was its chairman from 1919 to 1945.

Schwitzer pioneered the supercharging of internal combustion engines and was responsible for many developments in turbocharging. Youth To Be Outlined

Two dozen or more prospective students who are interested in the youth leadership training program to be inaugurated at Indiana Central College in September were guests of the college and the American Humanities Foundation Monday April 4.

Professor Ross Ludwig, who was director of the program on the campus; Miss Margaret Halstead, administrator of the program in the foundation's headquarters in Kansas City, and James L. Roberts, a Boy Scout executive who coordinated preparations for the program before Ludwig came to Indianapolis, represented the foundation.

Indiana Central was represented by Dr. I. Lynd Esch, president; Dr. Robert E. Cramer, academic dean, and Don E. Fleener, admissions director. Also invited to be present were Gregg and Harold Ransburg of Indianapolis; Garrett Troff of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and John S. Lynn of Lilly Endowment, Inc.

The student visitors registered at 4 p.m. and heard talks by Dr. Esch, Dr. Cramer, Professor Ludwig and Mr. Fleener. After a campus tour and dinner these speakers and others explained various facets of the youth leadership training program.

Indiana Central is the fourth college in the United States to be selected by the American Humanities Foundation to offer such training, which is designed to prepare professional leaders and administrators for youth-serving agencies.

Address Style Changing

In preparation for the use of automated mail sorting equipment, the Post Office Department has prepared a standardized two-letter state abbreviation for use by mailers. Since much of our alumni mail goes out in bulk, we have started to convert our addressing to the new state abbreviations. Some alumni will note that their addresses have been changed and others will soon note the difference. This may help to explain why some state name abbreviations look incomplete.

Appreciation

I want to express my sincere appreciation to all alumni who have answered the Roll Call. Your putting some of your treasure into ICC shows that you are also putting your heart into it. I know of no place more worthy of both. Every dollar that you contribute to Roll Call will be used for the improvement of faculty salaries. The improvement of faculty salaries should keep pace with the improvement of the physical plant, which every alumnus must be proud of. Thank you sincerely.

Textile Exhibit in Art Gallery

An exhibition of textiles opened in the art gallery of the Leah Ransburg Fine Arts Center at Indiana Central College February 7 and continued through February 25. The pieces were the work of Terry Illes and Budd Stalnaker of Bloomington.

Both craftsmen have national reputations as outstanding weavers, having won awards consistently. In addition to the more conventional and utilitarian approach to their craft, visitors saw weaving, tapestry and other textile techniques displayed as units concerned with the problem of space. This three-dimensional concept ordinarily is not pursued with such interest by most of the nation's weavers. The display was open to the public without charge.

Carmony Gives Lectures On State History

Dr. Donald Carmony ’29, head of the history department of Indiana University and chairman of the state committee for celebrating the sesquicentennial of Indiana’s becoming a state, is giving a series of sketches of Indiana’s history before the high schools of Indianapolis. In the first, at Emmerich Manual High School, he told what Indiana was like when it became a state, about the convention at Corydon, the first state capital, and about the moving of the capital to Indianapolis. He reported that in 1925, when Indianapolis became the capital, there were fewer people in Indiana than there are now pupils in the Indianapolis public schools.

Open Second Computer School

Skip Handy ’58 and his partner Walter Nagel, Jr. (IU) both of Fort Wayne, Indiana, will be opening their second computer school in June at 150 Market Street in Indianapolis. This is a franchised school with fifty-two sister schools across the United States and Canada. The Electronic Computer Programming Institute will be offering a complete course of study beginning with the basic E A M equipment and continuing through computer programming. The Fort Wayne School, which has been in operation since last June, is serving a vital need in northern Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan.

The Indianapolis school will be offering day, evening, and Saturday classes. Skip and Walter cordially invite you to stop by, renew old acquaintances, make new ones, and tour their facilities. The Handys also invite you to visit their new store, which will be opening this fall in the new Glenbrook Shopping Center in Fort Wayne. Dr. Nelson’s project will be the study of African nationalism at work. Most of the time will be spent in Kenya and Uganda in East Africa but with projected visits to other areas.

Grants for the projects have been made by the Department of State and the University of Indiana Northwestern Studies Program.

The group will fly from New York to Dakar June 27 and will spend July and August at the University of Nairobi and other areas.

“Nick” Quits All-Star Coaching

Because of having been elected president of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics at Kansas City, Angus Nicason has had to give up the coaching of the Indiana All-Star team in their Blind Fund Basketball battles with Kentucky.

It will be necessary for Nick to be on the road much of the time in June to attend committee meetings at the time the All-Stars are practicing in Indianapolis before the first game June 18, making it impossible for him to continue the job that has given him so much pleasure for 14 years.

Nick has compiled a 14-11 record with the All-Stars since 1952. Seven of the 11 losses were by four points or less.
Plan Launched to Encourage More Negroes To Get College Education

Indiana Central College and Attucks High School will cooperate in a program designed to encourage more capable Negro high school students to attend a college or university upon graduation.

The six-week series of discussion grew out of conferences between Dr. Robert E. McBride, professor of philosophy at Indiana Central, and Dr. Alexander M. Moore, principal of Attucks High School. They were joined in the planning by Earl Donaldson, vice principal of Attucks; Dr. Joseph Taylor, of the Indiana University regional campus in Indianapolis, and other members of the Indiana Central faculty.

“Leaders in public and private higher education have been much concerned in recent years over the fact that too few of the capable Negro high school graduates are finding their way into the halls of higher education,” they said in a statement. “While Negroes constitute approximately 13 per cent of the population of Indiana, only about 3 per cent of the total enrollment of the state’s colleges and universities is Negro.

“For those who feel that higher education and professional competence offer one very important road to greater economic and social integration of the Negro in our society, these figures are not very encouraging. The present program is an experiment designated to attack this problem.”

The purpose of the program was predicated upon three factors:

1. The need to stimulate and encourage Negro students to think about the personal and social importance of a college education in the rapidly growing and changing American society.

2. The need to overcome unrealistic fears and misconceptions about college life, its character and its demands.

3. The need to supply students with factual information and background relative to success in college.

The meetings began Thursday, February 17, and ended Tuesday, April 5. They were held at Attucks and started at 3:15 p.m. on the days designated, lasting an hour. Most of the students participating were seniors but a few juniors also partook. The group attending the sessions was limited to 60 students, with many of the meetings divided into several smaller groups. Some of the topics were “Why Go to College?” “Ingredients of Success in College,” “Facts and Fancies About the Negro in Education,” “The Meaning of Intelligence and the Development of Critical Thinking,” “Words, Words, Words—The Importance of Vocabulary,” and “Psychological Principles in Learning.”

Other leaders besides those who planned the program included Professor Elizabeth Selden, IU Downtown Center; Mrs. Osa Spurlock, Indiana Civil Liberties Commission office; Professor Landrum Shields, IU psychologist; Professor Miriam Langsam, IU history teacher; Dr. Dan Wolfe, assistant director of the IU extension center, and these members of the Indiana Central College faculty:

Dr. Marvin G. Baker, chairman of the Education Department; Professor Marvin Henricks, chairman of the Sociology Department; Dr. Robert Brooker, chairman of the Division of Science and Mathematics; Dr. Blanche Krick, psychology professor; Professor Martha Waller, English Department; Professor Ray E. Warden, Jr., English Department; and Mrs. Florabelle Wilson, Assistant librarian.

Cheerleader Lee Johnson affixes a good luck sign to one of the cars provided by Smart & Perry Ford City for the Greyhounds’ trip to Kansas City. Indiana Central represented District 21 (Indiana) in the N.A.I.A. national tournament, March 7-12. Ford City provided three 1966 Station Wagons for the trip through arrangements with Bob Waddell, New Car Sales Manager, and the Alumni Office.

New Summer Program

A greatly expanded summer program is being offered this year at Indiana Central. The program includes both day and evening classes. A June high school graduate can work during the summer and still get “a taste” of collegiate academic requirements before launching his full program in the fall. This opportunity is available to students even though they do not plan to attend Indiana Central in the fall.

ICC Leads All-Sports Race

With the end of the basketball and wrestling season, the 1965-66 Hoosier College Conference All-Sports race finds Indiana Central holding a slim 2½ point lead over second-place Anderson.

The Greyhounds successfully defended their 1964-65 title in wrestling under coach Paul Velez. However, Angus Nicolson's basketballers dropped to second place for the first time in three years, finishing behind Manchester's Spartans.

A tie for third place in football and sole possession of third place in tennis gives Central 51 points toward the All-Sports trophy. Anderson is a close second with 48½ points, followed by Taylor, 44½; Manchester, 38; Hanover, 27; Franklin, 25; and Earlham, 7.

Earlham being a new member gained no points in football and basketball. Although IC's hardwood quintet relinquished the conference crown this season, the Nicolson-led Hounds earned a trip to Kansas City and the national NAIA tournament for the second time in three years.

The Greyhounds gained revenge in the NAIA district 21 tourney at Anderson by clubbing Manchester for the second time in three meetings, 98-84, then won the K.C. trip with a scintillating 100-83 mop-up of host Anderson.

The Hounds nearly pulled the upset of the tourney when they pushed second-seeded Carson-Newman of Tennessee to the wire before bowing, 68-67.

Coach Velez' grapplers, winners of the first annual ICC wrestling meet last year, retained their title in the conference and also grabbed the Little State championship for the third straight time.

Posting an 8-3 dual meet record, the Hounds were led by senior Tim Giles, one of the most outstanding Indiana Central wrestlers in recent years. Giles lost but three times this year and 12 of his 14 victories were pins, including three straight under two minutes in the HCC meet. Tim, a 145-pounder, was voted the outstanding wrestler in both the ICC and Little State meets. He also was voted most valuable wrestler by his teammates and received the trophy for the fastest pin at 43 seconds.

Other outstanding wrestlers were sophomore Mike Watkins, who won the Little State 115-pound title; Dale Sidebottom, HCC and Little State champ in the 152-pound class; Dave Graves, 177 champ of HCC and Little State, and Maurice Barnes, who was also the champ in the HCC and Little State 191-pound class.
