Businessmen Take Leadership In Campaign

Four Indianapolis business executives and civic leaders will head divisions in Indiana Central College’s program to raise $5 million in capital funds.

They are Robert D. Hammer, senior vice president of Indianapolis Morris Plan; Corwin T. Geyer, executive vice president of the Mechanical Contractors Assn. of Indiana; John S. Thomas, head of the community relations department at Eli Lilly and Co., and Joseph D. Ward, vice president and comptroller of Indiana Bell Telephone Co.

Their appointment was announced by Dr. E. G. Plum, vice president of Indiana Central for development. The division leaders will be working with Dr. Plum and Leo W. Shumaker, retired Indiana Bell executives, who are serving as co-chairmen of the campaign.

Honorary chairman of the project is Herman C. Krannert, chairman of the board of Inland Container Corp., who is a trustee and benefactor of the college. The $5 million undertaking is one phase of a long-range program to add $25 million to the school’s assets.

A dormitory is being built on the campus now, and part of the $5 million will be used to build additions to Lilly Science Hall, the Physical Edu-

Alumni Should Act Now On Tuition Equalization

At the present time in Indiana each full-time undergraduate student attending one of our tax-supported universities pays about $400 per year in tuition and fees. The state, through tax subsidy, pays an additional $1200 in operating costs for each student. This figure does not include any funds for building construction. The average tuition and fees paid by each student at an independent college or university in the state is $1500. (This figure varies rather widely from school to school.) The state, through tax subsidy, provides no assistance for the student who attends an independent institution. Yet if these students should choose to attend a state school, it would require many millions of dollars of tax expenditure.

In 1965 the Indiana legislature passed a state scholarship law and established a commission to operate the program. Through it students who are Indiana residents and attend an Indiana college or university, tax-supported or independent, can apply for scholarship funds to help with tuition and fees. The program is good but very limited. Only the best students, if their families have financial need, can qualify. The 1969 legislation is being asked to broaden this legislation and provide funds to assist more students.

In addition to this a new proposal is being made. It is a proposal for grants-in-aid, where there is financial need, to students who choose to attend a college or university in Indiana which is not tax-supported. The only academic requirement will be that the student is able to meet the admission standards of the institution he chooses to attend and that it be a properly accredited school.

Specifically this is how it would work. The student whose family shows financial need and who desires to attend an independent college in the state would apply for a grant-in-aid. After the family from its available resources provides $400 toward tuition and fees for the year, (this is the amount the family now must provide if the student goes to a tax-supported institution) then the grant-in-aid from the state would provide up to $800 additional for tuition and fees. In no case would the grant be for more than the need demonstrated, or more than enough to pay the remainder of the tuition and fees, or more than $800 per year.

In effect this would, for the person receiving a grant-in-aid “equalize” tuition as between tax-supported and independent institutions up to $1200 per year. This would enable many students to choose attendance at an independent college if they desire, and at the same time it would save the taxpayers of the state at least $400 per year for each student who attends an independent institution instead of a tax-supported one.

We believe this is an extremely important proposal for higher education in Indiana. It will help keep alive and vital our dual system with its assets of diversity and competition. At the same time it will enable many students to choose the college they feel will best meet their needs and desires and also save money for the taxpayers of the state.

If this legislation is to pass, all who live in Indiana and who are in favor of it will have to make their desires known to the legislators of the state. The voice of everyone will be needed. The independent colleges and universities of Indiana are making a concentrated effort to promote this program. The bill will be introduced into both houses of the state legislature with bi-partisan support. The legislative session is not long so we must act quickly. Indiana alumni of the independent institutions will receive a special mailing suggesting specific things which they can do to encourage the approval of the program by the legislature. This provides an unusual opportunity for every alumnus to serve his alma mater and the total program of higher education in the state of Indiana.
Spectacular Growth

In going through my desk during the holidays I found the following, which had been clipped from the editorial page of a 1955 issue of the Indianapolis Star.

"Indiana Central College, celebrating its 50th anniversary year, is one of those sturdily individual private institutions which help to keep the ideals of independence alive in an era when so many seem bent on tossing it away for the illusory "security" of dependence on government. It is a sturdy, growing college which has continued a steady expansion through its first half-century and has plans on the drawing board for investment of $1,000,000 or more in new expansion as it prepares to begin the second 50 years.

We salute Indiana Central for its achievements of the past and the vigor with which it looks to the future. It is a credit to the city and the state, to the world of higher education, and to those who have had the vision to found it and perpetuate it."

What an enlargement and improvement has taken place since the above was written! It is hard to enumerate all the changes: new Academic Hall, new Physical Education Building, Lilly Science Hall, Student Schwitzer Center, apartments for married students, Nelson House—home of the president, complete renovation and beautification of the old Administration Building, Center for Industrial Relations and Continuing Education.

There are more than 15 years left of the second 50 years. What will those years bring if the college continues to move at the same pace as it has during the last 15 years? And signs are that it will. Instead of aiming at $1,000,000, it is now aiming for $25,000,000—not only for physical improvements but also for what is more important, continued improvement of faculty. The number of faculty members has increased to keep pace with the increase in number of students, and the proportion of faculty members with advanced degrees had noticeably increased.

Board Of Directors To Meet

The following letter written by the President of the Alumni Board of Directors will suggest to the alumni something of what the Board is doing. It meets four times a year.

Snellenberger To Judge Art Contest

Earl G. Snellenberger, Assistant Professor of Art at ICC is one of four selected to judge the Central Indiana Regional of the 1969 Arts Awards Contest, sponsored by The Indianapolis Star and L. S. Ayres & Co.

Three other named to judge artistic and photographic compositions from young artists in 47 central Indiana counties are: Roy H. French, professor of art at DePauw University; Sister M. Maurella, chairman of the art department at St. Francis College at Ft. Wayne, and Thomas D. Waddeleton, color photographer for The Indianapolis Star Magazine.

Snellenberger, a graduate of John Herron School of Art, now working on a doctorate at Indiana University, in addition to his teaching at Central, has illustrated several text books and authored three articles for Design Magazine. In 1962 he received a Lilly Foundation Grant for graduate study in the arts. In 1960 he received a Wolcott Award for travel and study in Europe. He came to Indiana Central in 1954.

Roll Call Needs You

As Indiana Central embarks upon a campaign to raise $5,000,000 from business, industry, and foundations in the Indianapolis Area, many alumni are asking, “How can we help?” The answer is a simple one—continue to support Alumni Roll Call in the annual fund campaign.

Why?

Because one question invariably asked of fund raisers is about Alumni participation. Large contributors are concerned that the graduates of an institution share in the outreach program of the college. We at Indiana Central can be proud of the facts of our annual fund support. Each year the dollar total has surpassed the high of the previous year. Each year our Roll Call contributions have provided more dollars for student aid, faculty improvements, and library service extension.

The area causing the most concern to the fund committee is the percentage of class participation. That is—the number of graduates who have made contributions.

To help with this problem, our class agents have been contacting classmates during the final six months of the fund drive. These alumni are volunteering their services to help Indiana Central maximize its potential. The message is a simple one—every dollar is important—when you're working with a budget that exceeds two million dollars. Each contributor is a vital addition to our Roll when major gift prospects question the alumni participation.

But probably most important of all is that some current student gets part of his education because you helped share the load. No matter who you are, no matter when you attended Indiana Central, someone else helped share the cost of your college work. Now it's your opportunity.

A suggestion. The next time you are asked to help in the Annual Fund campaign; ask yourself “why not?” Then watch our results grow.

Hoffman Made Chief Of Staff

Dr. Max Hoffman '50 of Covington, Indiana, has been made Chief of Staff at St. Elisabeth Hospital in Danville, Illinois. Dr. Hoffman is a member of the Board of Directors of the ICC Alumni Association.
Herman C. Krannert, Indianapolis industrialist and philanthropist, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of a program at Indiana Central College to raise $5 million. This was announced last month by Dr. I. Lynd Esch, president of the college.

“We are certainly gratified to have Mr. Krannert accept this assignment,” Dr. Esch commented. “Indiana Central College and the entire Indianapolis community appreciate the interest and generous support which Mr. and Mrs. Krannert have given them.”

Krannert, chairman of the board of Inland Container Corporation, has been a trustee of Indiana Central since 1960. The college awarded him an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in 1967 in recognition of his business leadership and his contributions to civic and cultural projects. His wife, Mrs. Ellnora Decker Krannert, received an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from the college in 1960.

The support of the Krannerts for educational, cultural, health agencies, and other projects for the betterment of mankind are manifold. A girls’ dormitory at Indiana Central is named Krannert Hall in recognition of Mr. and Mrs. Krannert’s benefactions to the college.

Their interest in higher education is evident on many other campuses also. They have made substantial contributions to such other schools as Butler, Evansville, Purdue, and Indiana Universities, and the University of Illinois, which is Mr. Krannert’s alma mater.

Mr. Krannert is a leader in the Indianapolis Museum of Art, for which buildings are being built at Oldfields, the former J. K. Lilly estate on the northwest side of Indianapolis. A family YMCA on the west side bears the Krannert name because of their support of that organization.

Gifts from them made possible the Krannert Tower at Methodist Hospital, the Krannert Pavilion at the Indiana University Medical Center, a heart research center at General Hospital, all in Indianapolis. In 1967 the Krannerts, members of the Meridian Street United Methodist Church in Indianapolis, were listed in the Methodist Hall of Fame for Philanthropy by the denomination’s National Board of Hospitals and Homes. They have also been cited by Who’s Who for their educational philanthropy.

Indiana Central’s $5 million goal is part of a long-range program to increase the college’s assets by $25 million by 1985. The immediate objective is to provide expansion for three buildings. The first is to be an addition to Lilly Science Hall which will double its capacity. This calls for more classrooms and laboratories and new quarters for the rapidly growing Department of Nursing Education. A swimming pool is to be added to the Schwitzer Center and will be used both for physical educational instruction and for recreational swimming. The third project will be an expansion of the Physical Education Building to provide a separate gymnasium for men and women and additional exercise and gymnastic facilities to meet the health and physical education needs of the growing student body.

Meaningful Memberships
Or
How To Carry A Club

Whenever three Americans gather together they form an organization. Three is the irreducible number so that one can serve as president, another as vice-president, and the third as secretary-treasurer. Preposterous you say? Well, there is not quite as much preposterous-icity (How is that for coining a new word?) in it as might appear at first blush.

The point is that we live in a too-busy and over-organized world. Reflect for a moment on the number of clubs, societies, and organizations that abound. The society columns, Who’s Who, introductions to public speakers, and high school yearbooks will add dozens more to your list. You can probably even find some in the Yellow Pages.

There are those, of course, who collect memberships and officeships for the imagined prestige which such affiliations and titles carry. Closely akin to this are those who hypocritically and self-righteously join because it gives them better business connections or creates a proper image of themselves which they think their associates expect of them. Then too, undoubtedly, some people collect memberships and titles as a hobby.

Probably, it is hoped fervently, most people do not fall entirely, at least, into these categories. Where there is a common background and a genuine community of interest and dedication, an organization constructively flourishes. And in our busy lives, what is important to us always gets attention and a dedication of our time and energies.

Regardless of station in life, geographic location, and philosophy or outlook, all who have graduated from or attended Indiana Central share a common educational heritage. This is true even with the generation gaps that prevail. However such a heritage might be defined, it nonetheless possesses certain unique or different characteristics from any other that Central’s graduates might share.

The vehicle for the perpetuation of its fellowship and for the expression of concern and constructive interest in Central’s continuing role in the molding of character and the preparation of young minds for today’s world is the Alumni Association. The effectiveness of the Association depends not only on a few dedicated officers and contributors but the earnest support and prayers of all its members.

Are you a participator or just one whose membership in the Association is coincidental because you have been affiliated with ICC in the past?

Long Time Teacher Appreciates ICC

Mrs. Helen L. (Fouts) (Ganshorn) Hartman, ’28, is in her 35th year of teaching, now employed by the Wannee School Board of Nappanee, Indiana. She writes; “I received my B.S. degree from Goshen College. I have taught 3rd grade for 35 years, and because of the need of a kindergarten in our Harrison School, where I’ve taught the last fifteen years, I changed from 3rd grade to Kindergarten and ‘love’ it. This is my third year in kindergarten. My appreciation of Indiana Central is far greater than I can express.”
Plum, Shumaker Named Co-Chairman of College Fund-Raising Drive

The appointment of E. G. (Ted) Plum and Leo W. Shumaker, both retired executives of the Indiana Bell Telephone Co., as co-chairmen of Indiana Central College's campaign for $5 million has been announced by President I. Lynd Esch.

Earlier President Esch announced that Herman C. Krannert, chairman of the board of the Inland Container Corp., has agreed to be honorary chairman of the fund-raising project. Krannert is a trustee of Indiana Central and one of its benefactors.

Plum retired as Indiana Bell’s vice president and comptroller Aug. 1, 1967, after 43 years with the firm. He has been a member of Indiana Central’s Board of Trustees since 1953 and chairman of its Development Committee. He became vice president for development of the college a year ago.

Plum has been active in many civic enterprises, and Indiana Central awarded him an honorary Doctor of Laws degree 10 years ago. He and Mrs. Plum live at 8320 Mud Creek Rd.

Shumaker retired Feb. 1, 1967, from Indiana Bell as assistant vice president-personnel. He had been with the utility 41 years, having joined it in 1926 upon graduation from Indiana University. He is a member of the “I” Men’s Association of I.U. and the Hoosier State Chapter of Telephone Pioneers.

Long active in church and civic affairs, Shumaker is an elder of the Presbyterian Church. He and Mrs. Shumaker live at 3601 Delmar Rd.

Indiana Central’s present goal for $5 million is one phase of a campaign to add a total of $25 million to the college’s assets by 1985.

Mrs. Browne Writes From Quito, Ecuador

My husband and I (Barbara Bean '66) have finally returned to our work here in Quito, after spending several weeks in the Galapagos Islands. Charlie was helping to build the electrical distribution system for the island of Santa Cruz. He was there for 10 weeks, and I joined him for 6 of those weeks after I returned from home leave in the States.

The Galapagos islands are a possession of Ecuador, located 600 miles from the mainland. The longer we were on Santa Cruz, the more we really loved the islands. The ground was covered with lava rock and volcanic dust, as there were no paved streets. The soil is one solid sheet of this rock, as Charlie found when he tried to dig holes for the line poles. 50 yards in front of our house was the sea, splashing up on the rocks when the tide came in. At low tide we could walk out on the rocks and watch all the marine iguanas (native to the Galapagos) as they licked the sea scum off the rocks or lay sleeping in groups of 5 or more. They were terribly afraid of us, and ran if we came any closer than 1/2 feet from them. But that in itself was close enough for me. Since I had never seen anything like the iguana before, I was really amazed. He looks like the only link we have today with the prehistoric past. Usually the marine iguanas we saw were about a foot long, blended in with the rocks, and had a most unusual custom of non-violence. Whether it is with a human being or an enemy of their own, the iguana never fights violently. He warns the invader that this is his territory by a nod of his head. If this doesn't work, he spits at the enemy. Since this trick didn't work on us, he ran. I suppose this is because they are so few in number anyway and this is their way to avoid extinction. I imagine there are other animals that do this same thing also.

The pelicans quite populated the bay area. They were forever flying overhead and diving into the water for a fish.

Almost every morning we had 20 to 30 little finches screaming outside our door. I started feeding them bread shortly after I arrived, and they know when they have got a good thing. They would even eat out of our hand. It was so amazing to me to be in a place where all the animals are still tame (not much contact yet with people).

One week Charlie and I rented a fishing boat for a day and went to a small island 3 hours from port, off the eastern coast of Santa Cruz. It's called Las Plaza, an island inhabited only by sea lions, land iguanas, and the bird population. We spent about 6 hours there, 3 hours to see the whole island and a couple more hours spent shooting pictures. The sea lions dominated the picture as we landed on the rocks. They all watched us as we entered their world. There must be well over 300 sea lions on that small island—and you can imagine the smell it leaves.

The sea lion seems almost human to me in some ways. I watched the care the mother took of her young ones, and how much the male guarded his own particular females. The biggest male sea lions have the most women to watch over. And if another male threatens their property a violent fight will ensue. The battle begins with the voice—a loud scream. Charlie decided to get in on a little of this fun. He started imitating one of the male by screaming back. Well suddenly the male came out of the water and started chasing Charlie. It was a good thing Charlie was on the rocks and not the beach—the sea lion is best in the water, second best on the beach, and not good at all climbing over rocks. You wouldn't be either if you had 500 lbs. of fat to carry with you. It is amazing to me to think of the number of small fish that must be supplied in the waters off the island to feed that many sea lions.

The birds on Plazas were numerous indeed in species. Some zoomed down to tap us on the back of the neck, others screamed when we came close to their nest.

The land iguanas were quite different in habit from the marine iguanas we had seen. They were yellow-orange in color to blend in with the land (not to blend in with the rock). They lived on the land and therefore ate what was provided for them—namely the cactus leaves. They were much larger than what we had expected. . . some as long as 2 1/2 feet (including the tail). And they were fast. Usually the closest we got to one (maybe 2 feet away) was when we stumbled across it accidentally. But they are much more adept to moving on land and could run very fast if scared. Many times we lost our subject for a nice picture.

It's no wonder Darwin was so fascinated by these islands!

The islands are really a tremendous place to see. They are still in the "beginning" stage as far as people are concerned, and some islands are still untouched by humans. Life is so calm, so beautiful, and ever so isolated there.

Transportation to and from the islands is still the worst problem for the traveller who wants to see the Galapagos. We eventually came back on the cattle ship, with at least 200 goats. The animals were fed nothing for 5 days and each day the dead goats were thrown to the sea.

But now we continue our work here in Quito, away from the terrific goat smell, while enjoying our tape recorder stereo system—a new addition which I brought back in kit form from the States. The sound is so great no one would believe we were volunteers. (A little luxury for another year surely can't hurt).

So goes our Peace Corps service. A truly fantastic experience in its entirety.

NURSING DEPARTMENT OFFERS NEW DEGREE

The Department of Nursing is pleased to announce that starting September, 1969, we will be offering both an Associate Degree and a Baccalaureate Degree curriculum. A student who completes the required associate degree curriculum, here at Indiana Central, and passes her State Board Examination may return to Indiana Central, and passes her State College board. We know of no other curriculum of this kind being offered.

The United States Surgeon General has advocated this type of "ladder" education in nursing for some time but nursing has been slow to respond. We do not have all the details worked out concerning transfer students as yet but hope to have them completed in the near future.

College Holds Art Exhibit, Sale

The Art Department of Indiana Central College held a public exhibition and sale of "Prints and Illuminated Pages" in the school's Leah Ransburg Gallery Dec. 9-18. Included as examples from the 15th and 16th centuries were manuscripts of medieval books, large music sheets, and illuminated leaves. A number of Iranian manuscripts also were for sale.

The emphasis of the exhibit was on the artist's treatment of religious subject matter from the times when religion was virtually the only subject portrayed to the current revival of art interest. The work of many outstanding contemporary artists not usually associated with religious art was included, as well as some well-known examples by Chagall and Rouault and other especially noted for religious work in the past eras.

The 80 pieces of display were priced from $3 up. Prof. Gerald G. Boyce, chairman of the Art Department, commented that "this is a unique opportunity for buyers and collectors to purchase these items at such affordable prices."

A BEGINNING

The first of the Alumni Memorial Art Collection has been delivered to the Alumni Office for hanging on the walls of college buildings. A $300 gift in memory of Eldon Hoos '28 was used to purchase five original etchings by Luigi Kasimir according to Professor Gerald Boyce who negotiated the purchase.

The pictures are scheduled for hanging in Schwitzer Center and Mr. Boyce is enthusiastic about the quality of the art. Contributors to the fund were the Round Robins of 1927-28-29.

Estate Planning Corner

You Would Like to Make a Gift—?

You would like to make a substantial gift to Indiana Central, but you feel you need the income from this capital during your lifetime.

Perhaps you plan a bequest, or you consider other ways or put it off and do nothing.

There are tax benefits if you do make a gift now, on both a Gift Annuity and a Life Income Agreement.

The Gift Annuity income is based on your age; the older you are the higher the rate of return.

The Life Income Agreement pays you on the basis of the earnings of the College Endowment Fund.

In both cases you receive an immediate tax benefit on the basis of the "gift value" of your agreement. On a Gift Annuity the greater part of the income is tax free. Survivor and joint agreements for man and wife are also available.

The Development Office will be glad to discuss annuity and life income plans with you, or you may request a booklet on the subject without obligation. You may call 787-6301, ext. 201 and receive information in strict confidence and without strings attached.

Also available is a free booklet to alumni on the subject of "Making Your Will."

This special service is available to all alumni. Why not at least ask about it?

Winter Sports' Teams Get Good Starts

Indiana Central has two strong units in its wrestling and basketball teams. Coaches Angus Nicoson and Paul Velez both have excellent chances to capture HCC crowns.

The wrestling team is led by Marlowe Mullen. He, along with the other grapplers, make for a strong nucleus. This season the first match for the wrestling team was the Little State Meet. This was a stiff test for the wrestling team, but they came away with two Little State champions and three boys who finished second. The Champions were Steve Palmore and Jim Phillips. Indiana Central has had five matches and done well in all.

The grapplers have beaten two conference opponents while losing only to Taylor. All matches are building up to the conference meet on February 21-22 which Central came away with last year. They hope to make an instant replay of last year's performance.

The Indiana Central Greyhound basketball team is one of the strongest the Hounds have had. The Hounds have more depth this year than any other team in the HCC. They are led by A1 Williams, who is averaging over the 20 point mark. The Hounds have lost only four of fifteen games so far this season.

They were tied for second in the conference with Hanover, their only defeat coming at the hands of the Panthers. Earlham was leading the HCC with no losses but the Quakers had not yet faced the Greyhounds. Overall, the Hounds are outrebounding their opponents by about thirteen caroms per game.

One of the big highlights of this season was the Hounds' victory over the Tigers of DePauw. Another good point of the season was the Capital City Tournament in which the Hounds won convincingly. The Hounds will have a rough time finishing on the top; but, as the saying goes, "When the going gets tough, the toughs get going."

Three IC Grads Coach Teams In AP’s Top Ten

Three of the high school basketball teams in the Jan. 9, 1968, Top Ten in the Associated Press poll are coached by graduates of Indiana Central College.

Angus Nicoson, Greyhound athletic director coached each of the three. Alphabetically, they are Jack Colescott at Marion, Bill Green at Indianapolis Washington, and Don Thomas at Indianapolis Attucks. Each played on one or more IC teams which won the Hoosier College basketball title.

Colescott, a graduate of the former Gas City High School (now Mississinewa), played four years at Indiana Central, graduating in 1952. He was on the first Greyhound team to win the HCC crown, in 1949, the second season of the league's existence, and was on the 1951 champ team also.

Gilbert Leon Taylor, a native of The two other years his team was second in the conference. Colescott coached at Swayzee High School before going to Marion.

Green also played four years at Central and graduated in 1956. He was on the 1956 championship team and his group was runner-up two other years. A graduate of Indianapolis Manual, he coached at two other Indianapolis high schools—Kennedy and Cathedral—before going to Washington.

Thomas’s four years of basketball at the college was interrupted by military service. He was a graduate of Attucks and graduated from Central in 1956. He played with the 1951 and 1952 HCC champs and his team was runnerup the two other years. He has coached at Attucks ever since college.
