Letter to the Editor

Sports figures defended against "academic snobbery"

To the Editor:

As a former colleague and an admirer of Dr. Bob McCauley, I was delighted to read his treatise on the "Business of the University" in the spring edition of the ALUMNI NEWS. Characteristically, Dr. McCauley’s arguments were well stated and thought-provoking.

I must admit to being rather disappointed, however, that Bob would suggest that Indiana Central's choice of "a head coach of a professional football team" as its commencement speaker somehow sacrificed the academic integrity of the institution. The curt dismissal of Mr. Landry implied that any person involved in a sport-related profession is unworthy to address such a solemn and scholarly gathering as a college graduation rite.

Academic snobbery, in its divers forms and applications, has always distressed me. Such a narrow view as that above, sadly, is embraced by a majority of the academic community in our American institutions of higher learning.

I suppose, based on the supposition that persons who find their life work in sport-related professions are beneath the higher order of American academia, Indiana Central would not be interested in having as its commencement speaker a world renowned scholar such as Miroslav Vanek, a pioneer in the discipline of sport psychology; or Dr. Harry Edwards, a sport sociologist whose impact on black American athletes and our society in general is well documented; or Sir Edmund Hillary, who has dedicated his life to the study of man’s relationship to his physical world; or Roone Arledge, who presides over one of modern man’s most staggering and influential technological achievements; or even, perhaps, James Michener, who deemed the phenomenon of sport worthy of a tome—SPORT IN AMERICA—which is a best seller. Would ICU have accepted Ernest Hemingway to speak to its graduates? Would its faculty have sat in mortification when he began to speak of the elemental struggle of man versus man, man versus the natural world, man versus other creatures?

Tom Landry is a football coach. If one would dare to probe further into his character, rather than dispense with him because of his occupation, I suspect one might uncover a remarkably gifted individual who, had he chosen, would have found success in any field. So it is with many outstanding persons in sport-related professions. The assumption is that they simply could not be intellectually or culturally equal to those in the academic community—else why would they waste their talent in sport?

Bob Knight is a sports figure who exists in a maelstrom of controversy. When compared to world hunger, or world peace, the coming of the Messiah, or other "serious" issues, his accomplishments as a basketball coach pale into insignificance. But doesn't your sense of inquiry make you curious as to how he obtains the consistent results that he does in his chosen profession? Wouldn't you be interested in listening to him personally relate his philosophy—I didn't say agree with it—which has taken him to the top of his field?

That the "primary task of a university faculty is to learn..." has been clearly stated. I couldn't agree more. To reject any area of our world because it would seem nothing could be learned from it is to be in conflict with the statement of what an academic community is all about.

Shame on you, Bob. You are more liberated than that!

Most sincerely,
Jim Brunnemer

NOTICE OF NONDISCRIMINATORY POLICIES
Indiana Central University admits students of any race, color and national and ethnic origin to all rights, privileges, programs, and activities generally accorded or made available to students at the University. It does not discriminate on any such basis in the administration of its educational policies, admissions policies, scholarship and loan programs, and athletic and other school-administered programs. Indiana Central is further committed to compliance with Federal Title IX legislation prohibiting sex discrimination in education. Indiana
Central also makes all of its educational programs available to the handicapped.
New honorary alumni are: Dr. Robert Brooker, Mrs. Gene (Joanne) Sease, Dr. Gene Sease, Mr. William Van Deman, The Reverend Charles Stanton, Mr. Don Earnhart, and Mr. Ted Polk. (See story on page 8.)

This article is being written several days after Commencement 1981. We are nearly finished with the 1980-81 fiscal year, our Board of Trustees has just met to review the annual report, and 496 additional degrees have just been granted. Mayor William H. Hudnut of Indianapolis, a former faculty member and current trustee, gave an inspiring and thought-provoking Baccalaureate/Commencement address.

Dr. Lester Irons, valuable and dedicated Chairman of our Board for the past six years and secretary for many years preceding, requested a rotation in our Board leadership. Dr. Zane G. Todd, Chairman and President of Indianapolis Power and Light Company, was elected to succeed him. Mr. John B. Smith, Chairman of the Board of the Mayflower Corporation, was elected a new member of the Board of Trustees.

Among significant items reviewed by the Board were:
- The retirement of four long-time faculty members—Dr. Leo S. Miller, Dr. Marshall Chambers, Dr. Roland Nelson, and Mr. John Swank.
- WICR-FM will co-locate on WRTV tower giving 100 ft. antenna and broad coverage.
- Number of wills in which ICU is included dramatically increased.
- Concepts of Liberal Arts courses strengthened in curriculum.
- English competency now to be required of all freshmen students.
- Dartmouth approach being tried by foreign language department.
- High percentage of pre-medical, pre-dental and medical tech students go on to graduate school.
- New residential audit program initiated by Center for Management Development.
- Alumni Career Day was highly successful.
- Addition of HP3000 Computer provides added academic and administrative capabilities.
- Alumni telethon sets new record in giving.
- FITNESS FOR THE FUTURE moves steadily forward.

These and many other significant advances were reviewed by our Board. Significant plans for international study, financial aid, and a review of academic areas were also included. It has been another record-setting year for ICU and we are grateful for all who have made it so. The detailed 83-page report of our office to the Board is available to all alumni upon request. We would be happy to provide a copy to those specifically interested who write and request one.

A Personal Note: Joanne and I were both pleasantly and genuinely surprised by the action of the Alumni Board to make us Honorary Alumni. We are both extremely proud of our relationship to this quality institution and will do all that we can to deserve the added honor. Thank you.

Youngblood named new ICU vice president

The retirement of ICU vice president and treasurer Leo S. Miller this spring has precipitated a number of administrative changes. Mr. Miller has been with Indiana Central for 31 years, and will retire in June.

Academic Dean Lynn Youngblood has been named as Mr. Miller's successor. Dr. Youngblood, a graduate of Miller's University and a member of the staff since 1966, has served as academic dean for the past five years. In making the announcement, President Sease said: "Dr. Youngblood is well qualified for this position. Prior to becoming academic dean, he served for five years as assistant to the president and was the director of admissions before that. By academic preparation, as well as administrative experience with the university, he has a good background for this position."

Dr. Youngblood has also served as a judge for the popular Channel 13 television show, Brain Game; chairman of the Higher Education Selection for United Way; co-host of Confab, a Channel 4 public service television program; chairman of the Education Division of Indianapolis Clean City Committee; Board of Directors and Bulletin Editor of the Downtown Optimist Club; and vice president of the Adult Education Policy Board of the United Southside Community Organization.

Dr. Youngblood received his B.A. from Indiana Central in 1968, the master of science degree from Butler in 1966, and the doctor of education degree from Indiana University in 1975.

Kendall L. Hottell, business manager for the university, will add to his present duties those of treasurer. Mr. Hottell earned his bachelor of science degree from Indiana Central in 1962, and his master of science degree in 1966 from Indiana University. Mr. Hottell, also an assistant professor of business administration, has been with Indiana Central since 1962.

Accountant Robert Barrick will move into the role of controller for the university beginning in the new fiscal year. Mr. Barrick holds a bachelor of science degree in business from Indiana University, and has been with Indiana Central since 1960.

Dr. Noel Baker, last spring named associate academic dean for Indiana Central, will serve as acting academic dean, filling the position vacated by Dr. Youngblood. He holds a doctorate from Indiana University, a master's from Kent State, and a bachelor's from Franklin College.

Assistant Accountant LaVerne Padrick will assume responsibilities of accountant for the university. She holds a bachelor of science degree from ICU and has done advanced study at Central as well.

Central's first vice president retiring

Leo S. Miller has served Indiana Central for 31 years. When he first arrived, it was as a professor of business and chairman of the business department. He later became business manager for the college, then was named by President Sease as the university's first vice president. Mr. Miller retired this spring, and at the Board of Trustees dinner in May was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree. He will continue in the Development Office as a development counselor on a part-time basis during the next year, visiting with interested individuals on behalf of the university.

In offering the prayer at the final faculty meeting of the 1980-81 year, Mr. Miller spoke for the entire faculty, but especially for those other members who retired in June: Dr. Marshall W. Chambers, director of church relations; Dr. Roland T. Nelson, professor and chairman of the history and political science department; and Mr. John G. Swank, assistant professor of speech.

"ACCEPT our thanks, Father, for every good gift; make us know that all good gifts come from Thee.

We are thankful for the opportunity to serve during the past year; and some of us are glad, even, for the year's end!

Be with those who will graduate; those who will decide that college is not for them and go their way; and with those who will return for yet another year.

Help us in the deliberations and decisions of this meeting, that each decision may be right for the situation.

Since it may be that no one else will pray for us, we do pray for those of us who are completing our tenure here: the more mature, sometimes called Senior Citizens (even "the old man").

May the distance of time shed a warm glow over even those matters which have been distasteful to us.

Keep us from trying to straighten out everyone else's affairs:

Keep us quiet about aches and pains.

Give us grace to make us reasonably sweet—but do not make us saints—some of them are too hard to live with.

But still make us useful in some way—to others—and to Thee.

And especially be with those who must return—it is they who really need your help and your presence. Give them a pleasant summer of renewal, and bring them back with new hopes and visions of what can be in the lives of those young people whom they serve.

In Jesus' name we pray. Amen."
Indiana Central University conferred five honorary degrees during the university's 76th Baccalaureate/Commencement May 17.

Commencement speaker William H. Hudnut III, Mayor of Indianapolis and a former faculty member at ICU, was presented an honorary doctor of letters degree. Mr. Harrison Eiteljorg was also presented an honorary doctor of letters degree, while the other honorees, General Alfred E. Ahner, Mr. Sam H. Jones, and North Central College President Gael D. Swing, received honorary doctor of laws degrees.

Mayor Hudnut, re-elected to a second four-year term in a record-breaking election, is the president of the National League of Cities, is active in the U.S. Conference of Mayors and is past president of the Indiana Republican Mayors' Association and the Indiana Association of Cities and Towns.

Prior to becoming mayor, Hudnut was director of the Department of Public Affairs and Community Services at Indiana Central University and served as Indiana's Eleventh District Congressman in the 93rd Congress. He is a graduate of Princeton University with high honors, a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, summa cum laude, and is a Phi Beta Kappa Scholar. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Indiana Central.

Harrison Eiteljorg is a coal mining executive, and his wide interest in the arts is known world-wide. His collection of African art was the most popular exhibit at Indiana Central's art gallery last year.

Sam Jones is the president of the Indianapolis Urban League. He is a graduate of Clark College and received degrees in sociology and social work from Atlanta University.

Mr. Jones was named as one of 10 Outstanding Young Men by the Cleveland Junior Chamber of Commerce. In addition to numerous civic honors and honorary degrees, he is a member of the Board of Methodist Hospital, Martin Center College, Indiana Inter-religious Commission of Human Equality, Greater Indianapolis NAACP, and Indiana Black Expo.

Mr. Jones serves as an advisor to the Junior League of Indianapolis, Human Rights Consortium, Indiana Civil Liberties Union, United Negro College Fund, Greater Indianapolis Progress Committee Housing Authority and Human Relations/Human Services Task Force.

Gael D. Swing, President of North Central College, Naperville, Illinois, has been at North Central since 1973. Prior to that, he was vice president for development at Franklin College. A graduate of Indiana University and Franklin College, Swing is the president of Associated Colleges of Illinois, and chairman of the Council of West Suburban Colleges. He has been a trustee of Franklin College and an advisor to the State of Illinois Board of Higher Education. Two of his three children attend ICU.

Major General Alfred F. Ahner is currently serving as the Indiana State Adjutant General. He has been appointed state adjutant general on five occasions by four governors. General Ahner graduated from ICU and became a teacher in the Frankfort, Indiana School System, where he taught for six years. In 1953, he was appointed full-time operations and training officer of the 38th Infantry Division of the National Guard. He received appointment as the adjutant general for the State of Indiana in 1960 with the rank of brigadier general.
Turner is 1981 Distinguished Alumnus

The Distinguished Alumnus Award was originated in 1967-68 for the purpose of providing recognition for outstanding achievements of men and women of the Indiana Central University family who are former students of the university, and who have demonstrated certain humanitarian qualities and an achievement level during their careers as to bring credit to both themselves and the University.

In the process of selecting that individual(s) annually who will be the recipient(s) of this award, we look for the following:

- One who has empathy for his/her fellow human beings;
- Applies a conspicuous portion of his/her time, talent and energies to improvement of the lot of his/her fellow human beings; and
- Consistently demonstrates intellectual and emotional maturity in all categories of his/her relationships with his/her fellow human beings.

We also look for one who in his/her chosen career performs or has performed at a level that clearly distinguishes him/her among peers in his/her occupation or profession, and in pursuit of activities not directly related to his/his occupational or professional career performs at a level adjudged outstanding by his/her immediate associates or others in a position to evaluate his/her performance.

Finally, we seek for one who by an act of benevolence or other outstanding service to Indiana Central University has contributed or is contributing significantly to the objectives and future of the institution and its family of alumni, students, faculty and staff.

Dr. Lynn W. Turner has been honored as the recipient of the 1980-81 Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Lynn W. Turner was born in Terre Haute, Indiana on July 7, 1906, the son of Ira and Sylvia Turner. His education began in the Terre Haute public schools. In 1919, he matriculated in the Indiana Central Academy and then continued his education at Indiana Central College, receiving the A.B. Degree in 1927. Vera, his wife and companion of some 52 years, was also a member of the 1927 graduating class. Lynn received a master of arts degree from Indiana University in 1932 and the Ph.D. degree from Harvard University in 1943. Dr. Turner has been honored by three universities, having received the doctor of laws degree from Indiana Central University; doctor of letters from Ohio Northern University; and, doctor of humane letters from Findlay College in Ohio.

He has had a distinguished professional career, having taught in high and junior high schools in Arcadia and Pittsboro, Indiana from 1928 through 1932, and River Falls State Teachers' College in Wisconsin in 1933 and 1934. From 1935 through 1947 he was associated with Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois, serving as an assistant professor, associate professor and professor of history, and chairman of the department of history and government. In 1947, he became a member of the faculty of Indiana University as first an assistant professor and then an associate professor of history.

During his tenure at Indiana University, Dr. Turner served as Director of the Indiana War History Commission which published three volumes of a planned 10-volume series on Indiana in World War II and supervised the research for four of the others. Dr. Turner personally wrote a number of articles and book reviews during those years. He was also on the Indiana Central Board of Trustees during most of this period.

Dr. Turner was elected president of Otterbein College in the spring of 1958, assumed office the following September, and continued until his retirement from this post in 1971. During his presidency of Otterbein College, eleven new buildings were added to the campus, student enrollment increased from 750 to over 1400, the debt was paid off, and the annual operating budget increased from $850,000 to $7,000,000. In addition, a number of innovations in calendar, curriculum, college governance and business procedure were introduced and implemented.

In 1954, Dr. Turner became the historian of Phi Alpha Theta and editor of its journal, the HISTORIAN. In 1963 and 1964 he was vice president of the Society and served as president the following two years. His involvement with the chapter involved a great deal of travel and many speaking engagements.

He has authored two books, contributed chapters to two others, and has written numerous magazine articles and book reviews.

Dr. Turner has served on many boards and agencies. Among these were: Trustees of Indiana Central College; Board of Directors, Ohio Council...

Special group added to Alumni Association

Many of us meet the technical definition of Indiana Central University alumni. We feel and act like alumni because we attended classes as students, made acquaintances with other students and members of the faculty, and learned of ICU's traditions, heritage, and goals for the future. As members of the alumni association, many of us have had the opportunity to serve the institution in a variety of ways, and support its activities and programs throughout the years.

Occasionally we find individuals who by their words and actions have adopted this university as their own, even though they have not attended or graduated from Indiana Central. The words and actions of these individuals demonstrate the sincere interest and dedication they have for this institution and its family. For their countless hours of involvement and service to Indiana Central University, we invite the following people to join our fellowship as "Honorary Alumni" of the Indiana Central University Alumni Association:

Robert M. Brooker, professor of chemistry at ICU since 1950. Dr. Brooker has been an inspiration to many students, especially in the science department, and many of his former students have become successful with his help. For his interest, encouragement, and guidance to these students, many alumni believe that Robert Brooker and Indiana Central are synonymous.

Don B. Earnhart, a member of the University Board of Trustees. Mr. Earnhart became a trustee in 1969 and serves as a member of the Executive Committee. As chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Earnhart has played a key role in the support and development of financial gifts to the institution.

Ted Polk, director of food services at ICU since 1973. Mr. Polk has served the students, administration, alumni, and university guests admirably during the past eight years. Mr. Polk demonstrates his love and concern for ICU by providing excellent service and quality meals at affordable prices. Our special thanks for his cordial personality and willingness to assist the alumni association in all of their activities.

Gene E. Sease, president of Indiana Central University. Since joining the ICU family in 1968, Dr. Sease has led this institution through change and transition that has encouraged growth and academic excellence, while retaining the religious and moral ideals incorporated by its founders in 1902.

Joanne D. Sease, goodwill ambassador for ICU. Much more than the mother of three children and the wife of the university president, Mrs. Sease acts as a gracious and poised hostess and representative at university and community activities and events.

Charles F. Stanton, pastor of the University Heights United Methodist Church. Reverend Stanton has not only served the hundreds of students, faculty, and alumni that attend our campus church, but he has also been a valuable member of our University Board of Trustees since 1971.

William R. Van Deman, secretary of the University Board of Trustees. Mr. Van Deman joined the board in 1970 and currently serves as its secretary and a member of its executive committee. Involved in the "FITNESS FOR THE FUTURE" Campaign, Mr. Van Deman has been a vital member of the board, lending his financial expertise and experience to university matters.

Mississippians who served as his associate, edited and wrote most of the material for THE MIDWEST; WHO'S WHO IN SOCIAL SCIENCES, WHO'S WHO IN AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE: TORY OF AMERICAN SCHOLARS; HISTORICAL MESSENGER, quarterly historical journal of the Central Illinois Conference.

Dr. Turner is listed in the DIRECTORY OF AMERICAN SCHOLARS; AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE: SOCIAL SCIENCES, WHO'S WHO IN THE MIDWEST; WHO'S WHO IN INDIANA; WHO KNOWS WHAT; and other biographical works of national and international repute.

The Turners have traveled in all fifty states, most of the Canadian provinces, Mexico, Guatemala, Panama, all but five of the countries in South America, four Caribbean Islands, all but five of the European nations, thirteen countries in Asia, six nations in Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Tahiti and Fiji.

Lynn and Vera were married in 1929. They had three children, two of them, Veralyn and Bruce still living; four granddaughters and two great-granddaughters. The Turners reside in the Otterbein Home in Lebanon, Ohio.

of Churches; the University Senate of the United Methodist Church; President of the Ohio Federation of Independent Colleges; Board of Publications of the Evangelical United Brethren Church; Vice President of the Five-College Commission (UM) in Ohio.

In 1970, Dr. Turner received a Freedom Foundation Award, and was invited to attend the Naval War College at Newport and a similar conference at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio.

Upon retirement in 1971, Dr. and Mrs. Turner moved to Bloomington, Illinois. In 1972, he was elected to the Commission on Archives and History of the Central Illinois Conference, the United Methodist Church, and in 1973 was elected secretary-historian and archivist of the Conference—a post he held until his second retirement in 1979. During this period he and Mrs. Turner, who served as his associate, edited and wrote most of the material for THE HISTORICAL MESSENGER, quarterly historical journal of the Central Illinois Conference.

Dr. Turner is listed in the DIRECTORY OF AMERICAN SCHOLARS; AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE: SOCIAL SCIENCES, WHO'S WHO IN THE MIDWEST; WHO'S WHO IN INDIANA; WHO KNOWS WHAT; and other biographical works of national and international repute.

Alumni Board makes commendations

Many persons, groups, and organizations have contributed significantly to the welfare and continuation of Indiana Central University as it has sought to fulfill its purpose of "Education for Service" during this past year. The following were approved for resolutions of commendation and appreciation for outstanding service to the university:

Richard M. Clutter, deceased. Dr. Clutter was an associate professor of history and political science at ICU since 1972. He was killed in a traffic accident while attending a seminar in Washington D.C. during the past year. He was highly regarded by both the faculty and students. We express our appreciation for his dedicated service and friendship and extend our sympathy to his family.

We commend:

Dr. Gene E. Sease and other members of the administration for another outstanding year of progress and achievement!

Mr. Robert Hunt and members of the Campaign Cabinet for their dedicated leadership and accomplishment in the "FITNESS FOR THE FUTURE" Campaign.

Mr. Dan J. Nicolson and the Development staff for their tireless efforts to inform alumni and friends of the university in ways to include Indiana Central in their personal financial plan.

Mr. Keith B. Van Deman, the director of Alumni Relations, who has effectively assumed the responsibility of his new position, and in the process, reflected both enthusiasm and creativity in his efforts and support of the Alumni Board and its officers.

We commend the following persons who are retiring:

Dr. Marshall W. Chambers, director of Church Relations since 1967. Dr. Chambers also admirably served the alumni association as the acting director of alumni during the 1978-79 school year.

Scholarship recipients chosen

The following 13 students were chosen from applicants to be recipients of an ICU alumni scholarship for 1981-82. Selection was based on the recommendation of ICU alumni and the students' demonstration of superior academic achievement and leadership in their schools, churches, and communities.

Jackie J. Bennett of Farmland, Indiana recommended by Ed Ziegler '71.

Ronald Bryant of Indianapolis, recommended by Mike Sims '76, Larry Hanni '58, and Tom Potts '55.

Douglas M. Charboneau of Indianapolis, recommended by Ralph Horn '53.

Steven L. Gale of Indianapolis, recommended by Ken Partridge '58.

Susan Glassburn of Bunker Hill, Indiana recommended by Susan Shockey '72, and Jim Emrich '71.

Whitney A. Herrold of Greenwood, Indiana recommended by Dave Sease '77.

Mary L. Kirsch of Beech Grove, Indiana recommended by Carol Marschke '64.

Laurie L. Siler of Elkhart, Indiana recommended by Susan Weybright.

Angela A. Springer of Indianapolis, recommended by Thomas Springer '61.

Debra L. Wheeler of Indianapolis, recommended by Sid Hall '80.

Paula J. Aldridge of Indianapolis, recommended by Marvin Knoop '57.

Jamie D. Simons of Angola, Indiana recommended by Dick Merritt '58.

April L. Storms of Elkhart, Indiana recommended by Jana Fleenor '73.

Presidential Scholars

Mr. Leo S. Miller, vice president and treasurer and associate professor of business administration. Mr. Miller served Indiana Central from 1948-1953 and from 1955 to the present, for a total of 31 years.

Dr. Roland T. Nelson, professor of history and political science and chairman of the department. Dr. Nelson has been a member of the faculty since 1959.

Mr. John G. Swank, assistant professor of speech and religion. Professor Swank joined the faculty in 1964.

To each retiring gentleman we express our thanks and wish you a long and happy retirement.

We recognize and congratulate:

Mr. Charles P. Monroe, alumnus from the class of '62, for his advancement to assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. We thank him for his participation and leadership at the 1980 Alumni Retreat.

John Ransburg '67 is the new president-elect of the Alumni Board. Other new members are: Gordon Core, Ralph Frey, Marilyn Hubbard, Jena Jones, and Sandy Lawlis.
Smith joins Board

Zane Todd elected Board of Trustees chairman

Mr. Zane G. Todd, chairman and president of Indianapolis Power and Light Company, has been elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of Indiana Central University. He has been a member of the ICU Board since 1977 and was recently elected to a second four-year term. Todd is a summa cum laude graduate of Purdue University and was awarded the honorary doctor of engineering degree by that institution. He is also a graduate of the ICU Program in Management Development. A director of Merchants National Bank and Trust Company, American State Insurance Company, and "500" Festival Associates, he is also a director of both the Indiana State and Indianapolis Chambers of Commerce.

Newly elected to the Board was Mr. John B. Smith, chairman of the Board and president of the Mayflower Corporation. A graduate of Indiana University, he is a member of the Board of Directors of Indiana National Corporation, Indiana National Bank, Citizens Gas and Coke Utility, the Indiana State and Indianapolis Chambers of Commerce, and the "500" Festival Associates.

Re-elected to the Board for another four-year term were Mr. Robert C. Hunt, chairman of the Board of Huber, Hunt, and Nichols, and Mr. Ralph Harvey of Valparaiso, owner of Harvey Stores, Inc.

Newly elected as members of the Executive Committee of the ICU Board were Dr. Harriet Capehart, a director of the Indianapolis Power and Light Company, and Mr. William R. Kiesel, vice president of King Traub Investments.

"Hostage T-shirt" money comes to ICU

At the annual trustee banquet on May 14, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Angermann of Dyer, Indiana were also in attendance. Dr. Angermann, the dentist who designed the T-shirts for the then-hostages in Iran, revealed plans to establish a scholarship at Indiana Central University for the children of those men killed in the Iranian rescue attempt, as well as for other students that wish to pursue a career in government service. Funds for the scholarship have been raised from the sale of the "hostage T-shirts," made famous when a number of hostages wore them on national television while held by the Iranians.

Foundation, Campaign Cabinet reach 100%

In January of this year Indiana Central announced its Fitness For The Future Campaign to raise $10,000,000. At the end of the first quarter of 1981 a review of the campaign's progress shows that the university's leadership is stepping to the front in supporting the campaign effort. Both the Board of Directors of Indiana National Corporation, Indiana National Bank, Foundation and the Campaign Cabinet have had 100% of their members make pledges to the Fitness For The Future Campaign.

ICU's director of Development, Dan Nicoson, expressed appreciation for the example set by these groups. He commented, "These leaders have been generously contributing of their time and expertise for the university's benefit. Their quickness to contribute financially as well demonstrates their commitment to Indiana Central and the high priority they have placed on the Fitness For The Future Plan."

The Alumni Association's Board of Directors is close behind at nearly 93%, while the university's Board of Trustees has reached nearly 90% participation. Employees of Indiana Central are also responding well although many felt that they needed to wait until salaries were set for next year before they could determine how much they could pledge. Now that contracts have been distributed to members of the faculty and professional staff, many are expected to finalize their plans.

The statewide solicitation of the alumni and friends is expected to be in full swing this summer.

The story of Epsilon Sigma Alpha

by Sylvia C. Henricks

(Edited note: The following article is a shortened version of a paper presented at the Epsilon Sigma Alpha annual dinner meeting, May 15, 1981. A complete copy is in the ICU archives.)

The formation of Epsilon Sigma Alpha, the Indiana Central University senior honor society, was announced at the honors convocation in June, 1947, a few days before Commencement.

Joseph A. White, one of the three seniors chosen to be the first initiates, now a pastor of the Washington United Methodist Church, Washington, Illinois, remembers the occasion. "All the seniors, the class being small, sat as a body on the stage of the Old Chapel in Old Main. I remember my great surprise at the announcement of the formation of the society and my even greater surprise when my name was read... It was most meaningful to me since I had to work to earn the entire cost of my education at the same time make a living for my family. That morning in the Chapel I shall never forget. It made the sacrifices to obtain a college education all worthwhile."

Lois McKain Hoban, in the years since graduation a homemaker and teacher, was another of the first seniors to be selected. She recalled the surprise in learning of the society, and that she had been named as one of the seniors to be admitted. She added, "I had an earlier hint when Miss Edna Miller started to congratulate me. At the convocation I realized what she knew that I didn't."

Victor M. Bogle, a history professor at I.U.-Kokomo after serving several years as chancellor there, was the third senior. He mentioned the "founding dinner" at Mr. and Mrs. Kek's home in University Heights. He said, "I remember Dr. Esch saying that the criteria for judging candidates for the new honor society were the same as those for Phi Beta Kappa—a point that I have somewhat questioned during these intervening years." But he expressed the sentiment, shared by all initiates to Epsilon Sigma Alpha, "I appreciate the distinction of being selected to membership."

Its organization came at a time of change and growth at Indiana Central. Dr. I. Lynd Esch had been installed as the new president in the spring of 1945. The curriculum was revised and enlarged that year. The United Brethren Church had shortly before strengthened its support of the school, and after the merger with the Evangelical Church in 1946, several conferences of the new E.U.B. denomination promised continuing aid. Of most importance, Indiana Central had added to its accreditation that of North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in March, 1947.

Those of Indiana Central's faculty who were also graduates of the school decided the time was appropriate to form an honor society. They received such authorization from the Faculty Committee on Institutional Study, and on May 15, 1947 the faculty approved the constitution they submitted. On Sunday afternoon, June 1, the group met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evan R. Kek (Evan Kek was the school's business manager, and Anna Dale Kek was professor of languages). They chose Evan Kek to act as chairman and made plans for a dinner to be held at the Kek's home on the following Tuesday, June 3, to honor the three initiates.

At the dinner Mr. Kek presided, speaking of Epsilon Sigma Alpha's purpose, "to encourage... scholarship... and to reward outstanding scholastic achievement." He welcomed the three new members into the group. The minutes for that meeting record:

The constitution was then signed by each member present... Mr. Kek, Dr. Anna Dale Kek, Roy Davis, Joseph White, Lois McKain, Victor Bogle, Dr. Ray Turley, Sibyl Weaver, Clara Proctor Reynolds, Anna Mary Glick, and Edna Miller. Kenneth Sidebottom, also a charter member, was not present.

Sibyl Weaver, professor of English, was elected the first president, and Edna Miller, librarian, the secretary-treasurer. Roy Davis, assistant professor of education, recommended that a $2 initiation fee be set "until such time as an insignia and pin could be chosen."

They decided on the name, Epsilon Sigma Alpha, the initials of the Greek words for Evangelical United Brethren (Euangelikoi Sumphteroi Adelphoi), the translation provided by Anna Kek. The faculty approved the new organization on June 5, 1947.

Standards for membership were patterned after national honor societies. (Mrs. Kek and Dr. Esch were members of Phi Beta Kappa, and Miss Miller a member of Phi Kappa Phi.) Membership in Epsilon Sigma Alpha required that candidates have "a scholarship index of at least 2.250 on a minimum of 100 semester hours, 70 of which must have been completed at Indiana Central College." Those meeting the academic qualifications were then, in an annual election, voted upon by the faculty in secret ballot, a 4/5 majority being required for admission to Epsilon Sigma Alpha. Those elected to membership were recognized by having their names "published in the Catalog number of the College bulletin, on the Senior Recognition Program, and on the Commencement program, and . . . submitted for publication to The Reflector and The Oracle."

Provision was also made in the constitution for pre-1947 graduates of Indiana Central. They were required to have a scholarship index of at least 2.250, and make written application to the faculty by January 1, 1950, for membership. Mr. Kek began preparing a list of graduates notifying them of their eligibility.

The earliest membership list, 1951, carries 127 names, 94 of which are alumni graduated before 1947.

The constitution authorized "a body of local members" to act as the executive committee. The "local body," composed "of members of the honor society connected with the college as students or as members of the faculty and staff," plans for the freshman honor society reception in the fall, and for the annual dinner and initiation of new members in the spring.

While the overall structure of Epsilon Sigma Alpha has remained unchanged, the constitution has been amended several times to allow for changes in computing the grade index, resident hour requirements, and faculty voting procedures. In February, 1969, a change in the constitution permitted "candidates for degrees from the graduate division to be considered for election to membership." Larry Eugene Compton was the first graduate student to be included with the seniors elected to membership.

In its role of encouraging scholarship on campus, Epsilon Sigma Alpha has sponsored the freshman honor society, also authorized by the faculty in May, 1947.

Eligibility for membership in Phi Alpha Epsilon required that a student have earned a scholarship index of 2.250 for 30 hours carried in the freshman year. The faculty then voted, taking into consideration the student's general contribution to the school. The four charter members of Phi Alpha Epsilon, inducted in 1948, were Helen Kays, Rebecca Sloan, Emilee Ann Tolliver, and Edna Wise.

In 1953 Epsilon Sigma Alpha began its policy of presenting pins, "suitably engraved," to Phi Alpha Epsilon initiates, at "a Thursday morning chapel" by the Epsilon Sigma Alpha president—Professor Roy Davis that year. Receptions honoring the initiates have varied from an informal evening at the Keks' or Miss Weaver's, a tea at Dr. Esch's home, to a dinner in their honor.

On November 14, 1980, 21 initiates were admitted to Phi Alpha Epsilon in a brief ceremony in Recital Hall, followed by a reception for members, their parents, faculty, and guests.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha has also tried to encourage academic achievement in other ways. In March, 1958, the executive committee considered the "publication of scholarly papers of members, students, and alumni members; . . . and the speeches which are given at the annual dinners; and the possibility of having an annual seminar.
for prospective graduate students.” In May philosophy and religion professor Robert McBride reported on the graduate seminar he had held: “About 25 students attended and . . . the seminar seemed to be quite successful.”

The February 21, 1964 Reflector carried a story of a meeting of the freshman and senior honor societies in Dr. McBride’s home to discuss “The Intellectual in the Modern World.” Such questions were raised as “Does Indiana Central College have an intellectual student body or faculty?” “Does our faculty actually provide the quality of stimuli necessary for an intellectual climate on campus?” and “Do an alarming number of students seem preoccupied with earning only a C in any possible manner—including cheating?”

The idea of a scholarship to be given to the outstanding member of the freshman honor society was first mentioned in the executive board minutes in May, 1964.

In May, 1965, with the approval of the membership the committee reported:

Epsilon Sigma Alpha will give an annual scholarship award on Awards Day to a member of the sophomore class who for two years has carried a regular academic load. The award will be based on scholarship and qualities of character and leadership which are fostered by Indiana Central.

In 1965, Maxine Alix received the first scholarship award, in the form of a letter to be presented to the treasurer of Epsilon Sigma Alpha upon her return to school in the fall, for a check of $100. As funds have allowed, the scholarships have increased in number and size.

Most Epsilon Sigma Alpha members have an attachment for their organization as it is, relatively free of meeting and committee duties. The work of the society is done by the executive committee. In their annual election of officers, they attempt to involve newer members of the board.

The membership and size of the board varies from year to year. The executive committee has several times discussed ways of enlarging itself. They have considered including other faculty members, or faculty holding memberships in other honor societies, having an advisory committee of Epsilon Sigma Alpha members, and including Indianapolis area alumni. At the present time there are 12 members on the executive committee: Diane Metheny, president, Susie Mitchell, secretary-treasurer, Wilmer Lawrence, LaVerne Padrick, Joy Caskey, Marshall Gregory, Roberta Outcalt, Martha Morris, Kenneth Sidebottom, James Weber, Edna Miller, and honorary member I. Lynd Esch. Kenneth Sidebottom of the mathematics department, and Edna Miller, retired librarian, charter members of the group, have been on the executive board for 34 years.

- David Schnepf
- Indianapolis, IN
- Carla Springer
- Kokomo, IN
- Leanna Stern
- Noblesville, IN
- Donald Striegel
- Indianapolis, IN

The whole membership meets only in the spring on the Friday before Commencement. A dinner and business meeting is the occasion for initiating new members into the society—31 this year, 7 of them from the graduate division. Dinners in the early years were sometimes off-campus, at the Apex Grill or the Homestead. More usual was a meal on the campus “prepared by Mrs. Peachey,” or in present times, by Ted Polk.

As Epsilon Sigma Alpha begins its 35th year, the founders can look back with satisfaction on their efforts to establish an Indiana Central University senior honor society, and the Epsilon Sigma Alpha members—whether longstanding or recent—can be proud of belonging to the ICU organization whose aim is the encouragement and recognition of academic excellence.

John Stucky II
Indianapolis, IN

Ronald Yoder
Indianapolis, IN

Bonnie Williams
Williamsport, IN

Each of these students has a minimum grade point ratio of 10.0 out of a possible 12.0 and have at least 85 credit hours at ICU.

Five scholars named

Indiana Central announces that five students have been awarded Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sophomore Scholarships. The following students were named in recognition of outstanding academic achievement:

- R. Joy Partridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Partridge of Indianapolis, Indiana
- Deidre J. Funkhouser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Funkhouser of Muncie, Indiana
- Susan Cline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Cline of North Vernon, Indiana
- Michelle M. Oakerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Oakerson of New Palestine, Indiana
- Joyce A. Burton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Burton Jr. of Greenwood, Indiana

Each of these students had a grade point average in excess of 11.0 on a 12.0 scale.
"The grade for these people is their raison d'etre, because a good grade justifies their existence."

Grades:
The American mania

by Michelle Stoneburner '66
Assistant Professor of Languages

It's 2:00 p.m. and I walk in to meet my 36 Concepts of the Liberal Arts students for another day. This is my biggest class this year. In fact, in 14 years of teaching it's my biggest class ever. But as a French professor who regularly faces no more than 10-15 students, I always feel a bit hesitant about calling this group to order. Not that there's any real threat in doing so; these are mostly typical 18-year olds, children of the '70s, the new wave of the '80s. They are more akin to the students of the '50s, I read recently; very practical-minded, they have come to college to "get ahead"; to learn a trade, to get a piece of paper to equip them for the business of "real life" out there in the "real world." In 10 weeks I have managed to sensitize them to have the decency to blush when they say this.

It is my job in this required freshman class to challenge them to reflect on most of the things they have unquestioningly accepted for 18 years. It is my job to ask them to examine their motives for coming to college. It is my job to encourage them to widen their horizons, and to think rationally and logically about the information they are examining in other classes. Sometimes I feel the gap between these kids of the '80s via the '70s, and me a product of the turbulent and iconoclastic '60s. More often I feel genuine amazement or dismay at what they tell me they think—and feel. They're very big these days on knowing what they "feel."

In today's class I want to talk about a liberal arts education and its purpose in their lives. We have all read a short essay, an apology for a liberal education in which the author suggests that college students have been, for the most part, grossly misled by parents and guidance counselors who have eschewed a liberal education because it isn't "practical." The author suggests that this sort of education is not an end, fitting the individual for a lifetime position in a high-demand, well-paid job. Rather, he says, this type of study is the means by which a person can learn to think logically, to solve problems, to be flexible enough to keep on learning. I've said all this before. Some of my students are convinced of this already (some were by their parents before I got them). Others still want their piece of paper saying the university certifies them qualified for the position of ______ just as soon as possible.

Today, for many reasons, students do not want to talk about a liberal education. They center instead on the author's statement that the average college graduate of today will change careers two to five times in his lifetime. This astounds some of them, though it is obvious that no amount of polite argument can convince many of them that this figure has anything to do with them personally. Like statistics on people who die in automobile crashes, it is apparent that these students believe that this figure simply doesn't apply to them.

Finally, somehow, the discussion centers on the importance of grades. We've hit on this before, and I've challenged them to justify their unshakeable conviction that grades are the real end-all and be-all of any serious university student's life. Their justifications center around the idea that parents and teachers have always told them grades are important. Surely these people wouldn't lie, would they? Grades must be important.

I sermonize again, that if what they're learning is important, the grade will take care of itself. I remind them that their logic is backwards, that putting the grade as a number one priority obscures the real purpose of the course; i.e. the knowledge one can gain from it. They are unconvinced. Many file out as the hour ends. A clutch of sincere ones stay to argue their point a bit longer; wanting very much, I sense, to convince me of the rightness of their side. I wonder about this briefly as I finally head, 10 minutes late, to my next class. Do they need my approval so much? Why is this grade question so important to them? But I must begin a discussion of Waiting for Godot, and put my own questions aside.

This evening I sit down after dinner with the new issue of a popular woman's magazine. It's one of those full of kids, recipes, crafts, and "pop" psychology. I buy it for the crafts, and as my monthly escape from the rigors of academe. A small box at the bottom of a page catches my eye. It is the announcement of next month's articles. One title reads, "How to Improve Your Child's Grades." A bell rings in my head. What will such an article say, I wonder? Will it recount study strategies and techniques for memorization? Will it even question the desirability of a child's getting better grades? Will it say anything about what a child is learning? Or will it enumerate 10 steps to follow which take so little time that the kid will not have to give up Little League, piano lessons, and the teen church group to improve his grades?

Grades vs. learning

I begin to believe my students. Parents preach about grades, cajole kids to make good grades, reward good grades, brag to their friends about good grades, are mortified when their child does poorly. No one, I mean no one, ever talks about what a child is learning. We want our children to succeed in school, in life. Grades are supposed to be a measure of that success, but I suddenly realize again (for this is not the first time I've met this truth; it is merely that I keep losing sight of it) that grades have, in fact, become a measure of the child himself. Good students make good grades and are therefore worthwhile people. Bad students make poor grades and are therefore rotten people, unworthy of anything but our contempt. Few of us adults ever question whether the child has learned anything in a class where he has a poor mark. We simply try to devise more ways for the student to shovel in enough facts to make a better grade. Or worse, Americans encourage grade inflation because we don't want our children to experience failure. Failure in America is the mark of an undeserving person. The whole system—parents, teachers, and administrators—seem committed to the idea that only the "worthy" human being gets good grades, and therefore good grades are the mark of a "worthy" individual. (One has only to overhear the disparaging or condescending remarks in the lounge of any high school where teachers are charged with remedial courses to know that they, too, believe this.)

No wonder my good students feel so threatened with my suggestion that grades aren't important, or at least need not occupy the central position they have in a serious student's life. The grade for these people is their raison d'etre, because a good grade justifies their existence; it proves they're O.K.

Until we all begin to believe that education justifies one's existence because of the sense of wonder with which knowledge and an appreciation of the arts enriches our lives, my students are doomed to believe that a C grade means they're not worth dust. And unless I can change their minds, their children will learn to believe this too.

How much of what is truly shoddy in American education has been instituted because we have lost sight of what it is we want to be teaching? Knowledge isn't memorizing facts to throw back on a test; we all say that, but so many of us give those kinds of tests; I do too. When will we begin to ask students to grapple with ideas at an earlier age? When will we praise the struggle to think and organize logically? When will we give credit for the struggle for knowledge as evidence of the child's growing intellectual capacity, but not of his personal worth?

A colleague of mine tells me I'm using medieval logic and idealism in the 20th century. I suppose that's his way of grading me. But I believe in anachronisms, and if I am one, that's O.K. with me. My students, those 36 heads in my classroom, deserve liberation from the chains of subjugation to grades. Here and there I see glimmers of minds that should learn to measure their own worth by different standards. So I'll sermonize the subject again, because teaching is like dropping pebbles in a pool. I'm often surprised when I get a glimpse of how far the ripples go.
MAY MERRIMENT!
A. Flutist Monica Gilman performed during the Commencement service.
B. Retiring church relations director Marshall Chambers gives Ronda Hall a hug.
C. Brian Bartley, Frank Vormohr, and Neal Yoder try to make themselves comfortable in their graduation gowns.
D. Rose Boggs and Martha Lynch personify the festive mood at graduation, held May 17th.

E. Tom Hinkle beams after receiving his diploma.
F. Eight teams entered the Second Annual Centennial Cyclorama on May 3rd.
G. Former roomies Brenda (Kingon) Linn and Anne (Ka Michel help themselves to a picnic lunch on Alumni Day May 16.
H. Dr. I. Lynd Esch, president-emeritus of Indiana Central, visits with alumni in the university park.
I. 1976 grads Tim Goets, Mark Jacobs, Chris Brown, and Ken Fuller got back together as the deq team New Life entertain at the Alumni Banquet.
Adaline Alkire’s March recital in Lafayette, Indiana’s Duncan Hall included selections of Soler, Beethoven, Copland, and Balakirew. She also judged for the Lafayette Symphony Keller Concert in February. She is a piano instructor in the ICU music department.

Dr. Noel Baker, acting academic dean, conducted two workshops entitled “Leadership in the Classroom” recently, for the High School Leadership Conference at Franklin College.

Dr. William Bishop and Dr. Norman Willey of the education department participated in workshops at the annual meeting of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education in Detroit. They dealt with standards for accreditation by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Dr. Al Brinson, associate professor of business administration, has been offered the role of Pawnee Bill in Annie Get Your Gun this summer at Spring Mill State Park Summer Stock Theater, with 12 performances in July and August.

Miriam Bender Diagnostic Center directors Pat Cook and Nancy O’Dell participated in the presentation of a television course offered to teachers of the Indianapolis Public School System for credit in the area of Learning Disabilities. Indiana, Ball State, Indiana State, Purdue, and Indiana Central universities are coordinating sessions via Video Network, with “live” instruction and student two-way talk-back capabilities.

ICU’s Dean for Student Services, Dr. Dave Huffman, has been asked to serve as Indiana’s representative on the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (NASPA) Region IV East Executive Council. The appointment was made by Dr. Henry Johnson, Vice President for Student Services at the University of Michigan and NASPA’s Region IV East President.

Sam Kegerreis, assistant professor of physical therapy, and Dennis Whitesel, physical therapy major, spoke to the Indianapolis Runner’s Forum on sports medicine and the recreational runner, and runner’s injuries.

Terry Malone, director of the physical therapy program, presented three papers at the National APTA meeting held in Reno, Nevada in March.

Tom McTamney, ICU Bookstore manager, was elected treasurer of the Association of Indiana College Stores, and will host the group’s fall meeting in October.

Dr. David F. Noble, associate professor of English, has been named to the post of acting associate academic dean, assuming the position of Dr. Noel Baker. Dr. Baker is now acting academic dean, as Lynn Youngblood was named vice president for the university. (See story on page 5.) Dr. Noble has been the chairman of the faculty’s Educational Policies and Curriculum Committee, which studies the institution’s educational programs, policies, and curriculum and makes recommendations where appropriate.

Ken Partridge, director of Continuing Education and Development, addressed the Wabash Valley Chapter of the Bank Administration Institute in Green Castle.

Dee Schaad, assistant professor of art, in March had a showing of his work at the 37th Wabash Valley Exhibit at the Sheldon Swope Art Galleries in Terre Haute. The Wabash Valley Show is a juried competition open to artists living in the four-state region comprising the valley. Dee’s work, Wife of Amenhotep, has been awarded a purchase prize and will become part of the collection of the Indiana State University Foundation.

David Searles of the music department faculty may be heard as a soloist on a recently recorded album, “Hail Gladdening Light,” with the choir of Christ Church Cathedral. He is the director of the Speedway United Methodist Church Adult Bell Choir, which recently became the first bell choir to perform in southern Indiana’s St. Meinrad Archabbey, the nation’s largest Roman Catholic monastery and seminary.

President Gene E. Sease, host of the WTTV show, Portraits, welcomed two graduating seniors on April 25. Steven Schwab and Dianne Reuter joined Dr. Sease for a discussion of their experience at Indiana Central and the thrill of graduation. Two weeks prior to that show, Dr. Sease interviewed Dr. Robert Angermann, who designed the eagle T-shirts and sent them to the hostages in Iran. President Sease recently became the 61st president of the United Way campaign.

Earl Snellenberger, associate art professor, presented a workshop at the Surface Design North Central Regional Conference at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb, Illinois. Professor Snellenberger also lectured and presented a workshop at the National Art Education Association Convention in Chicago in April, and was featured in a March interview for WFYI’s “On the Street,” discussing “wearable art,” in connection with the Indianapolis Art Museum display.

ICU Librarian Florabelle Wilson addressed the Marion Florabelle Wilson last month on the subject of "The Invisible Sinew: Black Families on Indianapolis’ South Side."
Student update

Ten seniors certified
At the ninth annual senior recognition dinner in March at the Eldorado Country Club, ten seniors received their American Humanics certificates: Andrea Beckett, Sandra Bruns, Brad Buck, Edith Burton, Vicki Harber, Shoshanna McDaniel, Judy Pentington, Kevin Ryan, Deb Wools, and Dan Young.

Judicial Board members named
The four students selected for membership on the Judicial Board for the 1981-82 school year are: Samuel Juett, Jill Ortman, Gordon Esterline, and Shelly Wetherald. The Board, created for students to have an avenue of appeal in the case of disciplinary action, consists of four faculty members and four students.

Art awards announced
Winners of the annual art department awards were announced on April 30. Dennis Massie was given the Anna Elizabeth Gott Award for most outstanding junior art student. The Indiana Artists—Craftsmen Awards in recognition of outstanding academic excellence were given to: Ron Beaman, Kathryn Peters, Harry Sykora, Kevin Hacker, Julie Kahle, Kim Alford, Becky Giroud, and Chris Biddinger. Melody Torrence won the Merrill Underwood Plaque for outstanding freshman art student.

Students hit the road
Fleximester classes involving travel spring term included: Community Organization in Action with a trip to Pisinemo, Arizona for involvement with a community of Papago Indians; Campus Canada, for experience with the influence of French language and culture in two French-Canadian cities; Washington Seminar, for possible visits with the President, White House staff, a Supreme Court member, influential Congressmen, et al.; and English Cathedrals, for study of the music, history, tradition, art and outreach of five cathedrals.

President Sease rooted for Miss ICU Nola Jones in the Miss Indiana contest in late June.

Winter/spring sports awards
Mike Wishnevski: Dr. Robert Brooker Outstanding Athlete of the Year, Most Valuable Player (baseball). Brian Hughes: Kelso Reid Mental Attitude Award, overall and basketball. Individual sports, Kelso Reid Mental Attitude: Terri Weise, women's basketball; Dave Lutgring, wrestling; Jeff Duhammel, baseball; Dennis Massie, track and field; Scott Pedigo, golf; Mike Donovan, tennis; Cheryl Jarrett, softball; Pam Bailey, women's track and field.

Music students earn awards
Mu Phi Epsilon's Indiana Central chapter has presented its music awards for 1980-81. Monica Gilman was awarded the Mu Phi Epsilon Alumni Chapter Award for outstanding senior scholarship and service to the chapter and school. The Beta Psi winner of the Madge Cathcart Gerke Award was Ronda Hall. Sherry Idlewine was the recipient of the Sterling Achievement Award, and Myron Williams was the Alumni Performance Recognition Award recipient.

Two English students published
English major Sharon Griner had a science fiction story accepted for publication in the April issue of the magazine Starlog. The piece was entitled "The Construction of Talitalanul." English minor Cindy Clendenon had a story published in Indianapolis' Star Magazine in March. The article was called "The Badminton Revival," and included six photos taken by Cindy, whose initial reason for writing the piece was for a Composition class.

Team MVP awards voted
Most Valuable Players named in each of the winter/spring intercollegiate sports teams are: Randy Mutschler, basketball; LuAnn Humphrey, women's basketball; Wade Hall, wrestling; Mike Wishnevski, baseball; Brian Barnhart, golf; Gary Welsh, tennis; Dennis Young, track and field; Tami Schlicher, softball; Pam Bailey, women's track and field. Julie Burkhart earned the Highest Academic Index Award. Julie earned a 10.737 out of 12, while participating in volleyball, basketball, and softball.

ICU in major choral performance
Indiana Central University's Concert Choir and Orchestra, directed by Paul Krasnovsky, teamed with West Lafayette's Bach Chorale Singers and Orchestra for a combined concert in April. Works performed included: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis and Toward the Unknown Region, both by Ralph Vaughan Williams, and Quattro Pezzi Sacri (Four Sacred Pieces) by Guiseppe Verdi.
Dr. Robert McCauley, assistant professor of philosophy, has been selected as a Post-Doctoral Fellow to the 1981 Summer Institute on Psychology and the Philosophy of Mind at the University of Washington in Seattle, Washington. He is one of 40 chosen from 500 applicants.

Dr. McCauley has been at ICU for two years. He is a graduate of Western Michigan University and received his M.A. in religion from the University of Chicago. His Ph.D. in philosophy was also awarded from the University of Chicago.

His academic honors include: Danforth Graduate Fellowship; George Sprau Prize for outstanding senior English major; Cornelius Loew Prize for Excellence in the Study of Religion; Mid-American Conference Scholar Athlete Award; W.M.U. Scholar Athlete of 1974; Mitchell Gary Scholarship; Waldo-Sangren Scholar Award; University Scholarship 1971-74; graduated summa cum laude; Mrs. Giles Whiting Foundation Dissertation Fellowship.

He has published a review of T.K. Seung's Cultural Thematics in Comparative Drama, Vol. 12, No. 2, pp. 170-72. A review of Karl Popper and John Eccles' The Self and Its Brain in Ethics is Dr. McCauley's coming work.

Math, science awards announced

The science and mathematics department at Indiana Central has presented annual awards to its outstanding students. The Outstanding Student Award this year went to two exceptional students: Mary Beth Elliott and Robert P. Albright. The Deborah Shay Award was presented to Robin Goble, and the Outstanding Senior Chemistry Student Award was given to David Albright.

The Wayne Patrick Comer Award for Excellence in Chemistry went to Florence Gin, and Samuel Juett was the recipient of the Outstanding Senior Laboratory Assistant Award.

Dianne L. Reuter received the Merrill Underwood Award for Excellence in Earth Sciences, while the Richard R. Priddy Award for Excellence in Geology went to Glenda R. Bagley. Cynthia Clendenon and Jay D. Drybread were co-winners of the Willam R. Gommel Award for Excellence in Atmospheric Sciences. The Dewey E. Gommel Award for Excellence in Mathematics was presented to Dawn R. Vermeier, and co-recipients of the Roy V. Davis Award for Excellence in Geography were John B. Pea and David J. Schnepf.

D. J. Angus Scientech Awards were presented to: Marsha Oakerson, Most Improved Chemistry Student; Paul Elliott, Most Improved Earth Science Student; Doug Esopenko, Most Improved Biology Student, and James Northey Jr., Most Improved Math Student.

Hansen, Lamberson made full professors

Dr. Adolf Hansen and James Lamberson have each been promoted to the rank of full professor at ICU.

Dr. Hansen has been in the philosophy and religion department at Central since 1971. He received his B.A. from Taylor University, the S.T.B. and S.T.M. from New York Theological Seminary, and his Ph.D from Northwestern University. Dr. Hansen's degree in religion has a primary emphasis in biblical studies, particularly the New Testament.

Among Dr. Hansen's many honors are listings in the International Who's Who in Education; Directory of American Scholars; Outstanding Educator in America Award; and a Rockefeller Doctoral Fellowship in Religion.

Mr. Lamberson, the chairperson of the music department, has been at Indiana Central since 1966. He graduated from Southwest University with a B.S. in music and from Indiana University with a master's in music specializing in organ. He has completed his course work on a doctorate from the University of Illinois.

Mr. Lamberson is currently the minister of music at the Northwood Christian Church. He is a member of the Music Educators National Conference; the Association of Disciples of Musicians; the American Guild of Organists; the Choristers Guild; American Association of University Professors; and the National Association of School Musicians.
Library books furnished by alumni parents

The ICAPS (Indiana Central Alumni Parents) Endowed Book Fund has reached a total of $12,954 as a result of the ICAPS 1980-81 fund-raising project. The money in the fund is invested and the earnings are used each year to purchase library books for the Krannert Memorial Library.

The ICAPS have made the fund the beneficiary of their efforts for three years. The current fiscal year will not end until the end of June, and as of the first of April this year's effort had raised $4,765. This is the largest amount ever raised by the ICAPS in a single year, surpassing the total of $4,670 in 1978-79.

If another $235 is received before July 1, 1981, the total will reach $5,000 for the first time.

Books purchased by the ICAPS Endowed Book Fund this year include the following:

Indiana Central's spring sports teams in 1981 gave all Greyhound fans a great deal to feel proud of, as the various clubs brought home four conference titles, a Little State crown, an undefeated season, and some national-caliber performers.

Coach Bob Tremain's baseball team, in their second year under Tremain, compiled a 23-11 record as opposed to 11-23 a year ago. A young club with only one senior and three juniors, the got there by winning both the Heartland and the Great Lakes Valley Conferences. Another factor which played a part in Central getting the bid was the 12-game win streak which began when the team had just finished a dismal spring break and ended when the Hounds played nationally ranked Northern Kentucky.

Jeff Duhammel, the only senior on the club this year, was the captain of the team, and was also chosen as the recipient of the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award. Duhammel, a third baseman, was named to the All-Regional Third Team. Wishnevski was a unanimous pick for the Most Valuable Player Award. "Wish" led the team in hitting, doubles, triples, RBIs, and home runs, and only made two errors in the field in 34 games. He was also named to First Team, All-Regional squad. Freshman Phil Benson of Logansport was named the Outstanding Pitcher of 1981. Benson, a walk-on, rolled to seven wins against just three losses.

For the second time in four years, the Greyhound baseball team was one of 20 in the nation to travel to the NCAA Division II Regional Tournament, this time in Troy, Alabama. The Hounds

Hounds set a school record for stolen bases in a season with 75. The Greyhounds tied the record for team home runs in a season with 22 and sophomore Mike Wishnevski tied Ken Brooks' 1976 season home run record of eight. Wishnevski also set a school record for batting average in a season (.487).

For the second time in four years the Greyhound baseball team was one of 20 in the nation to travel to the NCAA Division II Regional Tournament, this time in Troy, Alabama. The Hounds

Dennis Young, the team captain, was named the Most Valuable Player for 1981. Senior Dennis Massie, from Rushville, was given the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award.

The track team had many strong performers in 1981. Among the top men on the squad were Doug Esopenko, Dean Rich, Scott Beehler, Dave Wasson, Tim McMichel, James Nelson, and Doug Zehr.
Coach Ken Partridge's golf team was led this year by sophomore Brian Bartlett, who was named the Most Valuable for 1981. Other letter winners include Brian Bartlett, the lone senior on the team, Mike Hardwick, a junior, and freshmen Scott Pedigo and Gray Thompson. Hardwick was the team captain in 1981, and Pedigo, from Beech Grove, was given the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award.

Second year tennis coach Jeff West's Greyhounds had a rough spring, but with the talent returning next year, tennis should rebound strongly. This year's squad was led by Most Valuable Player Gary Welsh, a senior from Floyd Central High School. Mike Donovan was team captain and was also named the recipient of the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award. The Hound netters finished in a tie for third in the Great Lakes Valley Conference and sixth in the Heartland Conference match.

Lettermen returning next year will include Brett Denneman, Todd Gillespie, Scott Lacey, Jim Pinaire, Bill Randolph, Mike White, and Avery Williams.

Women's softball was another sport at Indiana Central that had a tough time in 1981. Going into the State Tournament, Coach Sue Willey's ladies had a 5-11 record. Captain for the squad was Julie Herdman. Tami Schlicher was voted the Most Valuable Player by the members of the team. Cheryl Jarrett received the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award.

Women's track and field under Coach Dawn Race returned most of the record-setters of a year ago and ran to a successful season. Freshman Pam Bailey from Elkhart was voted Most Valuable Player and received the Kelso-Reid Mental Attitude Award.

Soccer coming to ICU

The announcement was made this spring by Athletic Director Bill Bright that Indiana Central will field a soccer team for the first time in the school's history next fall. Ten games have been scheduled thus far, and the hope is that two more will be scheduled.

Joe Tugurian has agreed to coach the fledgling squad. Tugurian, a native of Turkey, has played in 32 World Cup Soccer games and still holds the Turkish record for number of goals scored.
Donor generosity keeps archivist busy

by H. Merrill Underwood ’40
Curator-Archivist

A number of notable acquisitions have been added to the Archives at Indiana Central University recently.

Space does not permit a comment upon all of the gifts received. However, it is appropriate to call attention to the list of donors and something of the nature of their gifts.

Listed below are the more recent acquisitions:

Gift of Dr. Donald F. Carmony
Memorabilia of ICU
Dr. Carmony is a former member of the ICU faculty in the department of history and political science.

Gift of Dr. Roy V. and Olive Davis
Memorabilia and book selections from their library
Dr. Davis was a former member of the ICU faculty in the department of education.

Gift of Dr. Arnold and Mrs. Hodgson
A collection of Central American artifacts from years spent in Panama
Dr. Hodgson was a director of Development at ICU and founded the first Fellows Club.

Gift of I. Lynd Esch
Memorabilia from the years of his presidency at ICU, 1945-1970
Dr. Esch was president during a period of rapid growth at ICU.

Gift of Mr. Harold and Mrs. Agnes Dawson Everitt
A collection of bound volumes of the Literary Digest, 1901-1931, from the library of Mr. John Everitt, Harold’s father.

Gift of Senator Richard Lugar
Memorabilia from his presidency at ICU, 1915-1944

Gift of Dr. Blanche Penrod
Memorabilia of earlier days of ICU from the collection of Mrs. Essie Penrod, mother of Blanche
Dr. Penrod, former Perry Township educator, is an alumnus of ICU.

Gift of Dr. James Weber
Memorabilia and artifacts
Dr. Weber was a former member of the faculty of ICU in the department of religion and philosophy and an alumnus of the university.

Gift of Dr. Sybil Weaver
Memorabilia from her years at ICU, 1918-1939
Gift of Dr. Weaver’s family
Dr. Weaver, an alumnus of ICU, was a member of the faculty and, before retiring, was the head of the English department.

Recognition should be given to the department of nursing, the Alumni Association and Public Relations for their generous gifts to the Archives. The continued contributions of alumni and friends of ICU to the Archives make possible the growth and continuity of our holdings.

In the five-year history of the Archives, many interesting and valuable histories and memorabilia have found a permanent home. A substantial number of photos, scrapbooks, and artifacts of Indiana Central’s history have enriched the Archives.

Guests, both alumni and others, have found the Archives an interesting and informative area to visit, and from the point of view of many, a beautiful and restful spot on campus. An invitation to visit this facility at Indiana Central on the second floor of Krannert Memorial Library is cordially extended.

The Arnold Hodgson Collection of Latin American Artifacts is partially represented on the wall shelves of Archives.
Placement services available to alumni

by Diane Metheny

Early this spring the Placement Office received a phone call from the personnel office of a large school system, asking if Indiana Central offered placement services to alumni. A number of ICU graduates had been affected by a reduction in force, and the school system was attempting to provide college placement information to all those teachers whose contracts had been terminated. Our answer to the inquiry was spontaneous: "Yes! We do offer a full range of placement services to teachers and graduates in all other disciplines."

The Indiana Central Office of Career Counseling and Placement Services (commonly referred to as the "Placement Office") has a growing file of alumni actively registered for placement purposes. There are currently over 100 alumni availing themselves of one or more of the services of the office. These services include:

- Providing material and information for the compilation of a file containing an individual’s placement credentials.
- Providing up-dated forms for those alumni previously registered with us.
- Sending placement credentials to employers upon request of either the employer or the candidate.
- Publishing a newsletter which lists all positions that have been reported to us. (The newsletter is the only service for which we are currently charging a fee.)
- Offering workshops and special programs to help students and alumni develop better job search techniques.
- Providing individual career counseling and placement services.
- Compiling lists of teachers (including alumni) seeking teaching positions and distributing these lists to public and private schools throughout Indiana and surrounding states.
- Contacting potential employers about our graduates and the programs they take or have taken.
- Arranging on-campus interviews and encouraging interested alumni to schedule appointments.
- Distributing our ICU Placement Manual and the College Placement Annual to alumni upon request.

As we have registered alumni with our office, we have discovered that some alumni merely wish to have up-dated credentials on file in the Placement Office, while others seek advice, assistance — and even moral support — in making career or job changes. We, therefore, take both active and passive roles in our association with alumni. We attempt to serve them on an individual basis — just as we do our current graduates. Moreover, we try to be candid about what we can and cannot do and what we will and will not do for individuals seeking employment.

An increasing number of employers are calling or writing the ICU Placement Office seeking experienced individuals; therefore, we are pleased to have alumni registered with us so that we can serve both the employer and our alumni.
Getting Personal

Sumwalt building bridges in Africa

New roads and bridges that Peace Corps Volunteer James A. Sumwalt of Chippewa Falls, Wis., is helping to build in the Central African Republic will connect with villages which had been completely isolated.

A 1978 pre-engineering graduate of Central, Sumwalt, 23, is part of an integrated project of rural development in this country located at almost the precise center of Africa and where more than 70 percent of the population live in rural areas.

"The people and culture of the Central African Republic have been stifled through years of oppression," he says. "Since the overthrow of Emperor Bokassa in 1979, the country shows hope of being able to make new growth toward development."

The rural development program is funded and administered by the German government. Sumwalt helps a German engineer and a local foreman coordinate the efforts of a local road repair and construction team.

"In the first year I was here, 18 bridges were built and about 62 miles of roads have been put in order," Sumwalt reports. "The road work, of course, is only temporary since the rainy season destroys most of the past year's work. The bridges I am building now are of concrete and granite and are hopefully permanent.

"The advantage for the villagers," he points out, "is having access to a central market in Paoua and thus to the capital. Previously many villagers were completely cut off from the outside, leaving them with no means of selling their crops or of buying necessary goods."

A typical day for the volunteer begins at 6:30 a.m. After spending some time in his office preparing salaries for workers, ordering materials and planning the work scheme, he is off to a worksite.

"There are some 240 miles of roads to recondition and about 65 bridges which need to be built. That's a lot," he adds, "when you consider that most of the work has to be done by hand."

Sumwalt shares a large house with another Peace Corps volunteer. "Although far from luxurious," he says, "it has been made quite comfortable with a lot of work. It is much like a rural home in the southwestern United States 50 or 75 years ago.

"The water runs—when there is water—or when I can fix the pump. The lights work when I can fix the generator, and the refrigerator keeps the food cold when I can find kerosene to run it," he laughs.

When a dry season turns into a rainy season here, the availability of food changes drastically as well, he says. During the rainy season, he has a variety of fruits and a few vegetables along with beef, mutton and chicken.

"The water runs—when there is water—or when I can fix the pump. The lights work when I can fix the generator, and the refrigerator keeps the food cold when I can find kerosene to run it," he laughs.

During this time, Sumwalt supplements his diet with canned or dried vegetables, imported from neighboring Cameroon.

There is no better example of the effects of the two seasons than his own back yard, he says. "For six months of the year, I live in a lush, green garden with grass, flowers and fruit trees. The other six months, I'm surrounded by a bleak desert without even the hint of vegetation, only sand," notes Sumwalt.

Evenings for the volunteer are spent at home, relaxing, reading or studying. On weekends, he often rides out to explore some backroads and trails.

"There are some beautiful places, rocky hills, waterfalls and rushing rivers," he observes. "Since my work obliges me to work closely with village chiefs, these weekend trips give me a chance to keep in touch with old friends as well as to make contact with new ones."

Sumwalt has also raised four pets: two monkeys, a gazelle and an antelope.

For the most part, Sumwalt speaks French, which he learned in intensive Peace Corps language training and has continued to improve through contact with others in the country.

"On the worksite and during my contact with villagers, I speak a little Sango, the local language," he reports. "What I know, I have learned through study and local contact. I am now studying German which I find useful in social and business contact with the German directorship."

The most rewarding part of his Peace Corps assignment, he says, "is seeing men who started two years ago with little or no training or experience. They are now becoming skilled tradesmen capable of taking on responsibility and showing a real pride in their work."

Completing two years of Peace Corps service in April, Sumwalt is one of about 40 volunteers serving in fisheries, health education, English teaching, agriculture and rural development programs in the Central African Republic. There are nearly 6,000 Peace Corps volunteers assigned to 62 developing countries around the world.
