Season's Greetings
An annual student essay contest created by the Alumni Association will honor the best essay written in English Composition 101. The first winner, to be named next spring, will receive a small stipend and the chance to have the essay published in the Indiana Central Magazine. To provide for this annual award endowment fund and support the cause of good composition, please send your check to the Alumni Office marked for the “Alumni Essay Award.”

Let’s get acquainted

The Office of Admissions has scheduled two Let’s Get Acquainted Programs. The first was on Tuesday, December 6, 1983, and the second is slated for Thursday, January 26, 1984. The programs run from 8:00 p.m. to approximately 9:15 p.m. in Schwitzer Center. Also, informal refreshment sessions are held for approximately 30 minutes before and after each program. The programs allow prospective students and their parents to meet faculty and staff and gather information about ICU.

Students hear candidates

Mayor William Hudnut and Democratic challenger John Sullivan addressed the Indiana Central University student body in October. Hudnut, who has since won re-election, and Sullivan discussed the issues in the Indianapolis mayoral election during convocation. The November 2 convocation featured candidates from the Socialist Workers’ Party and the Libertarian Party.

From the president’s desk

I am writing this at the end of a tremendously exciting week on campus. This has been a week of building campus spirit in preparation for the football game between Butler University and Indiana Central. It is known as the Top Dog game, since the Butler Bulldogs and the Indiana Central Greyhounds play. Though we lost the game, Butler could be very proud of their undefeated season—but that is not the purpose of this article.

It is to tell you of an incident that occurred during the week. The men of Dailey Hall (some of you will remember it as a women’s dormitory a good many years ago) decided that on one particular day of the week they should have a DAILEY PRIDE Day. As a part of their planning, all of the men of Dailey Hall wore business suits to class and for the entire day. In addition, they discarded all nicknames and called each other by their given names. They invited Joanne and me to have dinner with them that evening and all respectfully stood as we entered the room and later as we departed following dinner. I really can’t remember a time that Joanne and I took so much pride in a student group with whom we spent the evening. They were perfect gentlemen—the kind that all of us hope the sons in our homes to be. They took pride in their dormitory, in their campus and university, in their classes, and in each other.

This incident caused me to do some thinking about Indiana Central. I believe that the common characteristic that binds members of our Alumni Association together is what I would call INDIANA CENTRAL PRIDE. I see it almost daily in the mail I receive. One day this week, letters came from two diverse generations—one from a graduate in the 30s, another from a graduate of the 70s—a full forty years apart. Both letters, however, expressed the same sentiments about their alma mater and written throughout the paragraphs of the letters ran pride. On an almost daily basis I visit with alumni in the community, receive telephone calls from alumni out of the city, and letters from many others speaking of the pride that they have in Indiana Central. They speak of the university’s philosophy, tradition, goals, objectives, and influence, but more—they use words like accomplishment, achievement, growth, outreach, expansion, facilities, potential and future. Many comments are made about new buildings and equipment that were not available during their student years and of the possibility of graduate programs and expanded major fields which at one time the university did not have. Underlying many of the accolades I receive are notes of appreciation for the people who have made the university what it is, both in the past and in the present. This is the important message that comes to me!

While we are grateful for the buildings and enhanced facilities in which the exchange of ideas and new meanings of life may be explored, the real strength of the university is in the donors who make these things possible, the alumni who are all across the world representing the university, the current generation of students who take pride in what is happening to them and to their university, the parents who encourage their sons and daughters to attend ICU, the faculty and staff who bring a genuine sense of dedication and commitment to their task, and all of those across this world who recognize the significance of a growing and impressive university, located in Indianapolis, called Indiana Central.

I am grateful this week to the men of Dailey Hall who have taken a new sense of pride in themselves and their university. I am equally grateful for all of those alumni and friends of the university across the nations who take pride in Indiana Central. May our pride in each other and in our university continue and increase.
Richard Ratliff made a highly successful debut with his piano recital at Carnegie Hall in October, earning a favorable review from the New York Times. Quoting from the article of October 9: "In two selections from Messiaen’s mammoth works "Vingt Regards sur l’ Enfant Jesus" and "Catalogue de’ Oiseaux," Mr. Ratliff impressed with his understanding of the composer’s spatial conceptions, masterfully cohering the long silences, hushed chords and sudden, fluttering explosions of transcribed birdsong. These were all but ideal performances."

Earl Snellenberger, associate professor of art, received the Best of Show Award for a screen-printed textile wall hanging in the Inaugural Fine Arts Exhibition held in conjunction with the opening of the Warren Performing Arts Center.

Another of his works won first prize in the professional print category. He is also the recipient of Melvin Simon & Associates Merit Award for his work in the Indiana Artists Club, Inc. exhibit in October.

Alice Friman was accepted for a residency at the Dorland Mountain Art Colony in Temecula, California, for the month of March 1983; as a Fellow at the Ragdale Foundation in Lake Forest, Illinois, for April/May 1983; and as a Fellow at the Virginia Center For The Creative Arts in Sweet Briar, Virginia for July/August 1983. She attended the annual conference of the Associates Writers Program in April at St. Louis, Missouri. She offered a reading of her work at the Lyman-Snodgrass Gallery on October 19 and at St. Luke’s Methodist Church in Indianapolis on November 9. Also, she read at the annual Indiana College English Association held at Indiana Central on October 7. She ran a workshop on poetry at “Autumn Writes,” sponsored by Indiana State University at Terre Haute October 29.

Jane Kuroiwa is a senior music education major, and is treasurer of MENC.

Run for your Board!
If you are interested in serving on the ICU Alumni Association’s Board of Directors, please send a letter with a brief biographical sketch to Alumni Director Keith Van Deman. The Alumni Board meets three times each year on the university’s campus and handles the business and many activities to serve alumni. All interested candidates should submit a letter prior to February 1 for the Election Committee’s consideration.

Only notice
‘Cotton Patch Gospel’ Tour
The ICU Theatre’s performances of Cotton Patch Gospel will close on campus on February 19 and the company will then begin touring. Most performances will be given on Sunday evenings in churches throughout Indiana and surrounding states.

On August 4 the company will begin a three-week performance tour. A tentative itinerary includes Tulsa; Fort Worth; Roswell, New Mexico; Las Cruces; Phoenix; California; Salt Lake City; Cheyenne, Wyoming; Denver; and St. Joseph, Missouri.

One need not be a member of the cast or musical ensemble to be a member of the West Coast tour company. Anyone is welcome and all who go will be asked to become a member of one of the crews. If you would like information about the tour or have suggestions to make as to places where the troupe might perform, please write or call (1-317-788-3226) Dr. Richard A. Williams, Director of Theatre.

Santa Sandall

Bill Sandall and his wife, Barbara, have been making Christmas extra-special for the residents of the Southport, Indiana, area by decorating their home in a story-book setting and dressing up as Santa and Mrs. Claus. Not only do the Sandalls decorate and dress up, but they greet the youngsters and the young-at-heart on the street with many a "Ho ho ho" and a candy cane treat. Last year, the Sandalls distributed over 2,000 candy canes during a 7-day period to the occupants of hundreds of cars that slowly rolled past their house at 1152 Cragmont Drive. It's a great example of how an ICU alumnus serves his community and makes the Christmas season even more joyous.
