A Life Remembered, ICU Changed

It should have been a wonderful weekend. The first day of every new year is filled with promise, and January 1, 1983, seemed no different. In fact we had just sent to the media, to be released the following day, the good news that an anonymous donor had contributed $3 million to the university, virtually assuring a successful Fitness for the Future Campaign. Then the terrible news came. Death had suddenly claimed a stellar faculty member. Jim Lamberson was in his prime. He had built a music department faculty into what he sincerely felt was our strongest faculty to date and the department had achieved the coveted National Association of Schools of Music (NASM) accreditation. Jim was an outstanding department administrator, a master teacher, an excellent professional musician—and a good friend. There was no way that the good news about a major gift could even partially offset the sense of loss felt by the university community because of Jim's death. All too poignantly the comparison between "man and manna" came into perspective.

Indiana Central is a dramatically different university than it was some student generations ago in terms of its physical plant, annual budget, endowment, and library volumes, but improvements in those areas are rather insignificant unless they are complemented by caring and compassionate faculty. ICU alumni with whom I have visited over the years are in large part loyal to their alma mater because of faculty members who showed a caring concern. Jim Lamberson was just such a person. He was a scholar and a professional, but he was not above caring for his students and his peers. In fact, he believed very strongly in that. One of my last visits with Jim concerned a student in the music department who had recently incurred some unusual financial hardship. He was most articulate in expressing his concern for the student's welfare. That's the stuff of which he was made. His example should serve as an inspiration to those of us who survive him.

Yes, ICU has changed in many ways by physical standards. But it has not changed in terms of its faculty's level of dedication and commitment to its students. May it always be so!

Editor's Note: Memorial contributions may be made to the university.

Scholarship program successful

Did you know that in the last three years 37 ICU freshmen have been awarded $1,000 scholarships, given in recognition of records of excellence and accomplishments of ICU alumni?

The Alumni Scholarship Program, a part of the Project SUCCESS, is designed to assist superior students who are recommended by alumni for their academic achievement and demonstrate leadership in their schools, churches, and communities. Awards of $1,000 are available to selected applicants after being recommended by an alumnus and meeting certain criteria. These awards are renewable each year if the recipient maintains satisfactory scholastic performance. This means that a student you recommend could receive a $4,000 scholarship during four years at Indiana Central!

Such a program requires a large financial base, so we ask that you not (continued next page)
New soccer coach announced
State champion high school soccer coach John Katsaropoulos '63 has been named as soccer coach at ICU for the 1983-84 year. He guided North Central to an undefeated state championship last season. A native of Greece, he played soccer professionally in Athens. His record as prep coach is 178-17-7. He is currently working on a Ph.D. in French at the University of Kentucky.

Beech Grove Kiwanis give to campaign
The Kiwanis of Beech Grove, Indiana, has contributed $500 to ICU's Fitness for the Future Campaign. The contribution was one of several made to organizations which enhance the quality of life in Beech Grove. The check was presented on December 15, at the Kiwanis' regular meeting.

The new physical fitness center, for which an anonymous donor gave $3 million, looks nearly completed from the outside.

only recommend a candidate for an alumni scholarship, but that you help us maintain and fund this worthy project with your gifts.

If you will make a contribution towards the endowment of the Alumni Scholarship Program, it will not only allow us to sustain this student financial aid program, but it will also benefit our current Fitness for the Future Campaign. As we near the completion of this campaign, you may recall that one-half of our ten million dollar goal is set aside for endowment. What better way to invest your financial gift than in the ICU Alumni Scholarship Program?

$3 million campaign gift is anonymous
Indiana Central University has received an anonymous gift of $3 million toward its Fitness for the Future campaign.

The Physical Fitness facility, being built with part of the capital campaign funds, is to be completed by July. It will house the university's graduate physical therapy program and provide complete facilities for career preparation in pre-medicine, nursing, physical education and other health care fields. Over 20 new faculty offices, physiology laboratories, kinesiology laboratories, classrooms, and other academic facilities are included, as are an Olympic-size pool and many other health and recreational features.

In announcing the gift, President Gene E. Sease indicated that the Indianapolis donor presently prefers no public recognition and that payment will be made in three annual amounts of one million dollars each. He emphasized that this major gift is important in helping the university reach the goal of ten million dollars for the Fitness program. He commented: "When our current solicitation of alumni and friends is completed, we will have met the goal! This gift is particularly important in that a number of other pledges were conditioned upon our fully meeting the $10 million amount."

In expressing appreciation for the gift, Dr. Sease indicated that this is the third Indianapolis donor who has made an investment in ICU of at least three million dollars in the past 10 years. He said, "It is extremely encouraging to an independent institution like ours, which has accepted no government funds for any facilities, to find such generous friends who have helped us reach out with new programs to better serve our community."
WICR Open House
Indiana Central’s long-awaited increase in power and expanded programming became a reality January 26. ICU alumni and the public are invited to attend a WICR Open House on Sunday, February 27, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. in our new communications center in Buxton Hall. Another open house opportunity will be available on Alumni Day, May 21.

Gift annuities more attractive

We are all well aware that the interest rates available to us on our savings have been dropping sharply in recent weeks. On December 1, 1982, a call to an Indianapolis bank revealed that 26-week certificates of deposit were earning 8.761 percent with an annual effective yield of 9.081 percent and 30-month certificates were earning 9.65 percent with an annual effective yield of 10.279 percent. These rates are far below the 16 percent available a few months earlier. The rates on charitable gift annuities, however, have not changed and now appear more attractive to many older donors. Such annuity contracts with Indiana Central are now paying 8.1 percent to donors age 76 and the rates go as high as 14.0 percent to donors age 90 and over and offer various tax benefits not available to owners of most other savings instruments.

The return to more realistic interest rates is a positive development in the direction of a healthier American economy. We should be appreciative of the “bonus period” of higher rates which were received for a while rather than moaning because they are no longer available.

Indiana Central’s director of development, Dan Nicoson, feels there may now be an increased interest in charitable gift annuities on the part of older persons who have a desire to support charitable organizations. He points out that for those over 75 years of age the rates of earnings are comparable to those available from certificates.

However, the gift annuities provide the individual with the following advantages:

1. It is possible to make a charitable gift while continuing to receive the earnings from the contributed principal.

2. A major portion of the annual return from a charitable annuity is tax free, which is not true of most savings instruments.

3. A substantial income tax deduction is available when the annuity is funded, which is not true of most savings instruments.

4. When a gift annuity is funded with appreciated property the annual yield is based on the current market value of the property while most of the tax on capital gains is avoided.

Gift annuities provide a fixed-rate life income to the donors. If commercial interest rates drop in the future, or if they go up, the donor will always receive the amount of income which was set at the time of the gift. In order to qualify for the tax benefits, these annuities are irrevocable and therefore should be funded with assets which the donor can permanently set aside for such a purpose.

Nicoson also pointed out that gift annuities are often especially attractive to persons planning charitable bequests. If assets are passed to Indiana Central by will at the donor’s death, the university receives the benefits of the gift but the donor misses out on advantages which could have been received while still alive. Donors who advance their bequest in the form of an annuity are able to enjoy the satisfaction of making the gift, receive an income tax deduction, and receive the benefits of income which is largely tax free, none of which will happen if the gift is made after his or her death.

The Committee on Gift Annuities, a national organization which establishes the annuity rate schedule, will meet again in May of 1983 and the rates could be adjusted at that time. However, the current rates will be available until at least this coming May.

Dr. Suchocki to lecture

Dr. Marjorie Suchocki will speak about her book, God-Christ-Church: A Practical Guide to Process Theology, during the annual Showers Lectures at ICU. Dr. Suchocki is currently serving on the faculty of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, and will address two convocations at the university on Wednesday, February 16 and Friday, February 18. Topics will be "Transforming Theology" and "The Unmale God." The Showers Lectures are made possible through the generosity of the late Dr. J. Balmer Shm, a bishop of the EUB Church.

Physical therapy accredited

President Sease has announced that full accreditation has been received by ICU from the National Office of the American Physical Therapy Association. The program at Indiana Central is the first master's degree program in physical therapy to be developed in Indiana. The accreditation was granted for the maximum period by the A.P.T.A. Board of Directors in Washington, D.C. in December.

Following a nationwide search in 1979, Mr. Terry Malone, R.P.T., was brought to Indiana Central in early 1980 from Duke University to develop the new program. The first 18 students were admitted in September, 1980, all of whom successfully completed their master of science degree this past December. The program was begun in response to requests from area hospitals and nursing homes who told the university of their need for registered physical therapists. The program has received annual financial assistance toward its operating budget from the Krannert Charitable Trust.

Twenty-six students will be admitted in September from a large pool of applicants who have already applied for admission. The growing graduate physical therapy program will be housed in the new Physical Fitness Center now under construction on the campus.

ICUBA officers, speakers named

ICUBA continues to meet the second week of every month at 12 noon at the Columbia Club. All interested alumni are invited to attend. The new officers for 1983 are Bill Sandall, president; Zed Day III, president elect; Kevin Whitacre, program chairman; Ned Van Emon, publicity chairman; Gail Prather, secretary/treasurer. Speakers in the near future include Mayor William Hudnut and Marion County Prosecutor Steven Goldsmith.
