This old building has a new distinction: in March, Good Hall was entered on the National Register of Historic Places.
Summer research grants awarded

Summer research grants were awarded to professors David Anderson (history), for a historical journal article concerning the role of the U.S. in South Vietnam; Gerald Boyle (art), to continue documentation of funerary materials in western Europe; Toni Burns (English), to write a critical edition of Walter Hilton’s Epistle on the Mised Life; Eliseo Delfin (biology), to continue entomological research at Sandfly Island; Richard Marshall Jr. (English), to attend computer programming to develop software material for ICU’s writing lab. ❑

Above and beyond the call

Four ICU students received commendation from the National Weather Service for their efforts during a March winter storm. The four, Jeri Adams, Bill Havens, Jean Kendrick and Doug Poad, are broadcasters for the National Weather Service. Each made it to work during the storm and according to a spokeswoman for the NWS, each did an excellent job under pressure. ❑

Sociology scholars

Kathy Leising (senior), has been accepted to Indiana University School of Social Work. Rose Butler (senior) and Tami Schlicher (senior), were invited to present their papers at the Indiana Sociology Intercollegiate Symposium on March 23 and 24 in Bloomington. The topics for their presentations are “Interacting Variables of Female Adolescent Delinquency” and “The Empty Nest Syndrome.” Joyce Block (sophomore), is presenting a paper for the International Women’s Day sponsored by the Soil Conservation Federal Women’s Group. ❑

From the president’s desk

Last evening, Joanne and I entertained in our home the students from Indiana Central who come to us from outside of the continental United States. We commonly refer to them as “foreign students.”

Indiana Central has always had students from outside of the United States. From its earliest days and probably because of its close relationship to the then, United Brethren in Christ Church-whose missionaries went to Sierra Leone, West Africa, there was a considerable number of students from Sierra Leone. Now that picture has dramatically changed. Even though we still have students who come from Sierra Leone (many of them recommended by ICU alumni) the geographical base of our student population from countries other than the United States has been considerably broader.

This year we have the largest number of foreign students ever and have the broadest geographical distribution. For example, we have students from Saudi Arabia, India, Pakistan, Sudan, Morocco, West Germany, Tanzania, Korea, Ghana, Nigeria, Venezuela, Scotland, Hong Kong, and Cyprus. But the geographical spread is not the only broad range. Their ages and interests range widely also. For example, Ashery Wilson Gasabile will complete his Master of Business Administration degree this year. He is in his late thirties and has just become the parent of his fifth child, a son. Prior to attendance to Indiana Central, he was an internal auditor for the National Bank of Commerce in his native country of Tanzania, East Africa. He came to the United States to earn his A.B. degree in Economics and his B.S. degree in Business Accounting from Indiana University in Bloomington. He then enrolled in the M.B.A. program at Indiana Central University and it is interesting to hear him contrast the two institutions. He is very grateful for the personal attention and the individualized instruction that he has received at Indiana Central University. By contrast, the newest student is Victoria Tam. She hails from Hong Kong. She came during the Christmas holidays this year and is beginning her first semester with us. She is here because friends of hers have recommended that she come to the United States and attend Indiana Central. They, too, are alumni—Joyce, Sophia, Jessie, and Peter Chan, who have attended and graduated from Indiana Central.

I wish our readers and alumni could have listened to the conversations last evening in our home.

These students have a genuine appreciation for Indiana Central, for its faculty, their fellow students, and for the quality of instruction that they are receiving here. Peter Engleman, who is a senior this year from Germany, indicated that he thought he might come to a small school for one year, then transfer to a place like Harvard. He said that after his first year here he was convinced that Indiana Central could give him everything that the larger school could and that his education would be equally strong from here. In addition, he said he would have the benefit of all of the values that come from an institution our size. He has been a tutor in the German Lab and speaks with profound appreciation and genuine affection of Indiana Central. Many of the values and characteristics of Indiana Central as an institution, which most of us take for granted, are recognized and were genuinely articulated by this group of students in their discussions.

Indiana Central is the richer for their being a part of our student body. They bring a diversity of background, culture, experience, and perspective to our classes and to our campus. They are highly motivated students who are intent in their pursuit of academic excellence. We are the richer for their being in our midst.

Careful study is now being given by the Intercultural/International Study Committee of our faculty as to ways by which our students can benefit from courses offered abroad and study experiences in other nations. This is as it should be! We live in an ever-shrinking world where cross cultural experiences and international travel are common place. We are grateful that Indiana Central alumni are scattered all across the world and that they encourage students from various nations to attend the campus at Indiana Central. We look forward as well to the time when our campus outreach will extend far beyond the bounds of the continental United States into a variety of cultures and nations in other parts of the world.

Day Camp for community children

ICU hosted a day camp for children of the community on March 24 and April 7. The activity was a class project of Youth Agency Administration students. The age groups during the two weekends of participation were 5-14; activities included swimming, arts and crafts, group games including a 'parachute game,' olympics competition with prizes being awarded to all participants. The student volunteers were lead by Susanna Ferris (junior) and Alan Goytoski (senior).

Art '92 and Mary Petty Rhoads '33 of Cape Coral, Florida, hosted an alumni get-together last month. Alumni Director Keith Van Dermaan also visited alumni in Orlando, Clearwater, Sarasota, and Ft. Lauderdale.
Parents' weekend a success
Parents' Weekend was held March 31 through April 1. The Student Life Office sponsored a fun-filled weekend for students and their parents. Activities included the dinner theatre, seminars, art show, receptions, and use of the Ruth Lilly Center. Student Life said as many as 300 people took part in the weekend's events.

Central joins in centralized interviews
ICU recently participated in the second annual Centralized Interview Day at the Indiana Convention Center in Indianapolis. More than 20 Indiana Central students participated in the event. The event provides employers with an opportunity to interview college seniors with a wide range of academic backgrounds at one centralized location. The event was funded by the Indianapolis Consortium for Urban Education, Eli Lilly and Company and the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce.

Finals Week survival kits
The ICU Alumni Association developed Finals Week Survival kits, which were delivered to students the first week in April. The kits contained various snacks and goodies and contained special “Good Luck” messages from the senders (generally parents or faculty and staff). Besides making finals week just a little more bearable, students were more aware of the association and alumni interest.

People on campus

Dave Wantz (Center for Continuing Education), was President Sease's guest on "Portraits" on March 17. He discussed ways to detect drunk drivers and how to protect oneself from this menace.

Dale Rieth (music), provided “Market Day Music” at the City Market on March 2. He will be a judge for the all-campus “Purdue Sing” on April 14.

Paul Lucas (school of business) has authored his third text, Modern Construction Accounting Methods and Controls.

Florabelle Wilson used puppets to describe black life in Indiana in the late 1800s at the State Museum on March 11 and 14. "Storytellers of the Black Experience" was presented in conjunction with the exhibit “Achievers Against the Odds.”

Dr. William Gommel (earth and space sciences) presented a program on tornadoes at the Air Force Association meeting on March 24 at Indianapolis.

Alice Friman (English) and Bill Bishop (education) are serving on a Faculty Development Grant Committee at the Indianapolis Museum of Art. The Committee is developing proposals and seeking endowments for museum-sponsored programs that would target college and university professors at institutions in the Consortium for Urban Education.

Henrietta (Rider) Showalter Mrs. Harvey (Henrietta) Showalter died March 27, 1984, at her home in Indianapolis. Mrs. Showalter was honored as the ICU Alumni Association's Distinguished Alumna in 1971 for her unequalled humanitarian qualities and many achievements.

Formerly a writer and teacher, Henrietta was at one time the choir director of the University Heights United Methodist Church and its soprano soloist.

Other memberships included Epsilon Tau Chapter of Kappa Kappa Sorority at Southport, Indiana Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society, and the Fellows Club of ICU.

Confined to bed with MS for many years, Mrs. Showalter was an inspiration to all who came in contact with her. As one ICU freshman said, "I remember going Christmas caroling at her home and we came away feeling really good and uplifted from our visit with her."

A dedicated and loyal alumna, Henrietta was always aware of what was going on at her alma mater. Upon a return ride in an ambulance from the hospital to her south side home, she asked the driver to detour past the ICU Ruth Lilly Center for Health and Fitness so that she could view this new facility and see where her old dormitory, Wilmore Hall, once stood. It's not surprising that Henrietta's last wish was to take another detour, this time on the way to Forest Lawn Cemetery, through the old ICU horseshoe where so many of her fond memories and friendships began. Her wish was honored.

Survivors include her husband, Harvey '41, and daughters Mary Alice Smith '62, Marcia Louise Combs; and sons John, Lloyd, and Robert '80.
