University inaugurates Lantz as sixth president

The University of Indianapolis inaugurated its sixth president on Thursday, October 6. Dr. G. Benjamin Lantz Jr. became president of the institution on the 86th anniversary of its founding in 1902.

Lantz was elected to the position in June, capping a five-month nationwide search. He took office on July 1.

Delegates representing colleges, universities, and learned societies throughout the nation, along with the faculty and trustees of the university, dressed in academic regalia for the inaugural ceremony.

Dr. Richard F. Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities and former president of DePauw University, delivered the inaugural address. Rosser is regarded as one of the nation's leading authorities on public policies affecting higher education.

Rosser's remarks were followed by the investiture of Lantz and the passing of the presidential medallion from Dr. Gene E. Sease, chancellor. Sease served as president of the university from October 1970 through June of this year.

Alumni Association President Norma Dartis '81 brought greetings to the new president. Zane G. Todd, chairman of the university's board of trustees, spoke on behalf of the trustees. Representatives of other university-related groups also brought greetings.

This will be Lantz's second university presidency. He presided at Mount Union College in Alliance, Ohio, from 1980 to 1985. After leaving Mount Union, Lantz served as vice president of administration and development for Nesco, Inc., a Cleveland-based conglomerate.

Though he came to the University of Indianapolis from business, Lantz is steeped in academe. In addition to serving as president of Mount Union, Lantz was dean of the college from 1975 to 1980. He was a member of the faculty at West Virginia Wesleyan College in Buckhannon for seven years and served as chairman of the college's Division of Humanities. He also spent one year as assistant to the president at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio.

Lantz earned his bachelor's degree with honors in English in 1960 from West Virginia Wesleyan. In 1964 he was awarded a bachelor's degree with honors in sacred theology from Boston University where he later earned a Ph.D. in historical research in biblical studies.

An ordained United Methodist minister, Lantz has served pastorates (Methodist and Presbyterian) in Massachusetts and West Virginia.

Lantz and his wife, Mary Sue, have five children; three are married, one is in college and a 16-year-old son remains at home.
