Hyperbolic geometry doesn't make him hyper—Jason Esselborn, an eighth-grader at School #72 (Emma Donnan Junior High), appears unfazed as he peruses a copy of a geometry quiz in a University of Indianapolis classroom. Jason was one of a number of Emma Donnan students who participated in Shadow Day activities, wherein middle-schoolers spend a day on campus to get a taste of college life.
Alumni cultivating careers search for ‘daisies’

Rather than rake wet leaves on a dreary Saturday morning, 57 alums chose to spend three hours on November 19 with a well-known expert, counselor and trainer in the career development field.

Mike Kenney of Career Consultants, Indianapolis, enlightened and entertained the attendees on a host of career and job search issues and topics. Identifying one’s ideal job, or “daisy,” is the first order of business, he advised. Once a person has accomplished this very basic—but often overlooked—task, he or she is ready to ask for help from other individuals in locating a position that best matches specifications and qualifications. Nine times out of ten, the job the candidate finally lands will not have been advertised, but discovered “through the grapevine” of a vast hidden job market.

Mr. Kenney also distinguished three types of skills for those present: job content, self management, and transferable skills. While job seekers think employers are most concerned with job content skills, in reality they are more frequently searching out the other two types, suggests Kenney. Technical ability is only one aspect of the hiring equation and process—a fact that has been demonstrated and communicated time and time again.

“Career Transition: Strategies for Success” was co-sponsored by the Office of Alumni Relations and the Office of Career Planning and Placement Services.

It’s time to say ‘Thank you!’

The university has just completed the 1988 Alumni-Student Phonathon, which, for the third straight year, has resulted in the highest dollar figure in pledges in the university’s phonathon history. More significantly, a greater number of alumni made pledges, boosting our overall alumni participation level. During 14 nights of calling, 42 student volunteers called alumni through the nation. We owe a big thank you to all of you who made this possible.

Women hoopsters start tradition with alumni game

A new tradition started at U of I with the first annual women's basketball varsity-alumni scrimmage November 11 in Nicoson Hall. With a good crowd in attendance, the 1988-89 Lady Greyhounds took on a team of U of I alumni.

The game was a high-scoring contest, with both teams shooting well. Coach Chuck Mallender's current Lady Greyhounds prevailed 100-93 over the alumni, who were coached by current graduate assistant coach and former player Stacy Rathbun in the inaugural contest.

Mary Maravilla led the current Lady Greyhounds with 20 points, with Heidi Lawrence, Erin Byrd, Cindy Simko, Francie Patterson, and Kelli Tungate all in double figures.

Kate Silavs '88 paced the alumni with 27 points, while Debbie Law added 20. Former assistant coach Linda Mallender also scored in double figures with 14 points. Other alumni players were Terry Wiese-Pedigo, Lisa Hardin, Debbie Cole, Kim Epler, Pam Bright-Talamo, Jennifer Robinson, Jessica Mason, and Kelly Miller. Former assistant coach Laura Lord also played for the alumni.

Did you ever wonder what happened to Myla Rose Cook, that girl with the tattoos down the hall in your dorm?
Or whether Bjorn Lusar really did become a brain surgeon, or just take over his dad’s dogsled repair shop?

If so, you’ll support our efforts to produce the 1989
U of I Alumni Directory, scheduled for delivery in June 1989!

- Please return your survey so that we may update our records on the new computer system
- All alumni will be included unless otherwise requested
- If you have misplaced your questionnaire, you will receive a second one if you haven’t responded by mid-January
- Listings will be organized alphabetically, geographically, and by graduation year.
