Miss America brings AIDS Awareness platform to campus

Before capturing the Miss America 1993 crown in Atlantic City in September, Leonza Cornett of Jacksonville, Florida, was an AIDS Awareness volunteer at Serenity House, a home that specializes in pediatric care for children with AIDS.

Cornett brought her AIDS Awareness platform to the University of Indianapolis in November as guest celebrity for the world premiere of Robin Myers' new play, Airwaves, directed by Dr. Richard Williams. The play, set in Indianapolis, is a "comic tragedy" about AIDS in the heterosexual community.

Following a private dinner at the home of President and Mrs. Lantz, she spoke and sang before the opening curtain and greeted guests at the benefit reception in Schweizer Center following the play.

Cornett feels that AIDS is no longer the disease affecting "someone else" but is one which will in due time affect a friend or family member of nearby everyone. She thinks the nation's focus on AIDS awareness should change from "dying from AIDS" to "living with AIDS."

Cornett, who is traveling nationwide with her AIDS Awareness platform, is a Communications major at Rollins College in Winter Haven, Florida, but has put her studies on hold. She had transferred to Rollins after three years at Jacksonville University in order to facilitate her role as Ariel, the Little Mermaid, at nearby Disney World. At Jacksonville University she was a theatre and communications major, a sister of Delta Delta Delta sorority, and an active participant in theatre productions.

The 21-year-old has had eight years of voice training and extensive theatre training and experience. She performed for the members of the United States and Soviet navies aboard the USS Whitney upon its return from the Persian Gulf.

She wore the crowns of Miss Jacksonville 1989, Miss Jacksonville University 1991 and Miss Winter Haven 1992 before winning Miss Florida honors in June. Last year, as first runner-up in the Miss Florida pageant, she went on to compete against fellow finalists from other Miss America state pageants and captured the 1991 National Sweetheart title.

After completing her duties as Miss America, she plans to use her $35,000 Miss America scholarship to continue her college education. Her career ambition is to become a professional entertainer.

Co-op Education helps students learn and earn

The University of Indianapolis strives to help its students become better prepared for life after college. The Office of Cooperative Education helps by developing opportunities for students to participate in paid, productive work experiences outside the university. The program allows students to finance part of their college expenses, enhance academic experience with related work experience, and explore career paths. Such learn-and-earn experiences make students more marketable upon graduation.

The office works with businesses, government agencies, and nonprofit organizations to make matches based on their needs and the qualifications of students. Alumni can help by advising the office of co-op positions or paid-intern opportunities, or by hiring U of I students. If you have ideas for helping students find co-op experiences or desire more information, call Judy Haselkus, director of cooperative education, (317) 788-3560, or Susan Canady at 788-3591.

Lead academic all-conference team

Greyhounds set standard for academic and athletic excellence

The University of Indianapolis placed a league-high 26 student-athletes on the Great Lakes Valley Conference 1992 Fall Academic All-Conference Team. Included in that impressive total are seven members of the GLVC champion women's cross country team and four from the GLVC champion men's golf team.

Along with those two squads, U of I led the 10-team conference with four players from Coach Dawn Patel's GLVC runner-up women's tennis team (which beat Butler for the first time ever) and five from Coach Sue Willey's 15-3 volleyball team. The nationally ranked Greyhound golfers will begin their spring season on Fripp Island, South Carolina, on March 7.

Indianapolis' 94-72 win over Franklin in the championship game was shown on WHMB-TV to a statewide audience.

Alumni Profile: Never a dull moment for Esther Mann

Esther Mann has made her own history. It isn’t every day that an 84-year-old graduate from college or receives the highest honor that a citizen of Indiana can achieve. Nor is it every day that a woman like Esther Mann comes along.

Mrs. Mann moved to the Altenheim Community in 1988, bringing not only her enthusiasm for life, but her own interesting history and accomplishments as well. Colorful characters are a part of Mrs. Mann’s family tree. Her paternal great-grandfather served under George Washington at Valley Forge. Her great-grandfather was an early settler in Indiana in the 1830s, who traveled to the state with 10 children on a raft, complete with livestock via the Ohio River. Mrs. Mann’s grandfather traveled to the West in a covered wagon and returned via Panama (before the Canal). Her father taught school during the Civil War; her mother was born five days after President Lincoln’s death.

Esther Mann herself was ahead of her time, becoming involved in politics in 1934 when she served as a committee vice-chair for a mayoral candidate. She voted the first year women won the right to vote and since then, she proudly states, she has not missed a vote!

Three years after her husband’s death in 1971, Esther enrolled in night classes at the University of Indianapolis to finish the degree she had started many years earlier. She graduated in 1985 and was the oldest person to ever receive a degree from the school. That same year, she received “The Sagamore of the Wabash,” which is the highest honor the governor of Indiana can bestow upon its citizens. To this day, she humbly states, she doesn’t understand why she was given such an honor.

While Esther admits she has “slowed down,” she still enjoys many volunteer activities. “God put us here to take care of his children. I feel like the Altenheim residents are my brothers and sisters. I want to help others as long as I am able.” From The Lamplighter, United Church Homes

New Alumni Directory in the offing

Finding a former classmate can be just like looking for the proverbial "needle in a haystack." But not any more. Soon an impressive directory of our alumni will be available to help you locate your old friends.

The new University of Indianapolis Alumni Directory, scheduled for release in July 1994, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference on the nearly 12,000 U of I alumni ever compiled. This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic data, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic, library-quality edition.

The Alumni Association has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc. to produce our directory. Harris will soon begin researching and compiling information for the directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumna and alumnus. If you prefer not to be listed in the directory, please contact the Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.

The new Alumni Directory will soon make finding a University of Indianapolis alumna or alumnus as easy as opening a book. Look for more details on the project in future issues.
