Mary Elizabeth Edwards Ober was honored by the university at a donor appreciation dinner August 25, acknowledging her gift of $600,000 to renovate Schwitzer Center dining hall and construct the new pavilion attached to Schwitzer.

The Ober Dining Hall and Plaza were dedicated by President Lantz at the annual dinner, attended by 350 of the university’s major benefactors. Mrs. Ober’s gift was a significant part of the $1.25 million renovation to Schwitzer, which began in May and was completed the day of the dinner.

Mrs. Ober, who offered the gift in memory of her late husband, Cy, told the assembly that her husband had believed strongly in the value of educating young people. “He would be very happy to know about this, and I am pleased to continue with what he loved,” she said.

Mrs. Ober has also given the C.S. Ober Scholarships in Business to the university. The Obers were the founding family of Stationers office supply stores.

Dr. Lantz unveiled a bronze plaque, bearing the likenesses of Mary and Cy Ober, which has been placed in the foyer between the plaza and dining room. He also presented Mrs. Ober with an original painting of the “new” Schwitzer Center by art professor Earl Snellenberger. Dinner guests received signed prints of the painting.

Guests were served each course of the meal on a different floor of Schwitzer, so that they could tour all areas of the newly remodeled facility.
DeHaan warns graduates against ‘encumbrances’

International businesswoman and university trustee Christel DeHaan challenged University of Indianapolis graduates to "choose passionately not to be ordinary," lest their dreams be dashed by the current "Age of Encumbrance."

The owner and chief executive officer of Resort Condominiums International, Inc., the world's largest vacation exchange company, told the 557 graduating students (a university record) in April to "fight through this Age of Encumbrance that will do everything it can to distract you from greatness."

Today's most threatening "encumbrance," DeHaan said, is "our penchant for conflict in the world. What used to be competition now is conflict. What used to be a democracy of ideas on a thousand fronts has devolved into confrontation, in-your-face anger, and lines drawn in the sand."

"My generation suffered through wars, from World War II to Vietnam. Today you are involved in no wars, but in a hundred times more conflict."

DeHaan, who immigrated from Germany, is ranked among the nation's top 50 women business owners by Working Woman magazine.

"I'm frequently asked," she said, "why it is that people from foreign lands can come to America, often penniless . . . and end up millionaires and philanthropists. The reason, I think, is because they were not encumbered. They never feared failure, because in their dreams they always succeeded. They clung ferociously to the visions of their youth."

She said that "America was a country full of homes with front porches" when she arrived 30 years ago. "It seemed to me that front porches turned streets into livable places through the small amenity of a wave or a smile, or an invitation for a cool drink on a hot day."

But when people began turning inward, preferring decks and fences and electric garage doors, neighborhood disappeared.

DeHaan also advised graduates to "fight through this Age of Encumbrance" by "choosing passionately not to be encumbered."

"You are involved in no wars, but in a hundred times more conflict," she said.

DeHaan invited her audience to build front porches in their lives and "set up a chair. Better yet, set up two and ask a neighbor over."

DeHaan also advised graduates to teach their children civility: "Teach them the small amenities that deaden conflict. Listen to them and teach them to listen. Hold their hands and teach them to hold hands. Show them the wonders of conversation, the joy of reading a book. Teach them restraint and show them wisdom. Walk with them in the woods. And give them a legacy of peace."

DeHaan, a former student, was awarded the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree. She spoke to a packed audience in Nicoson Hall, not far from the girders of the 59,000-square-foot Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center scheduled for completion next spring. The $10 million Center will feature an acoustically outstanding performance hall described by its acoustical engineer as "unparalleled in the Midwest." The Center will have an art gallery, classrooms, practice rooms, and offices.

Honorary Doctorates

Receiving honorary doctorates from the university at Commencement were: Zane Todd, retired chairman of the board and president of IPALCO Enterprises, Inc., and immediate past chair of the university's Board of Trustees (Doctor of Humane Letters); Congressman Lee H. Hamilton, Democratic representative from the Ninth District of Indiana (Doctor of Laws); and The Reverend Richard E. Hamilton, pastor of North United Methodist Church (Doctor of Divinity). The Hamiltons are brothers.

Meet your new alumni director

Cassie Hall looks for creative promotions to involve alumni

Cassie Hall — professional events planner, University of Oklahoma alumni club founder, and certified tennis umpire—has been named director for Alumni/Parent Relations. Her appointment was announced by Dr. James L. Brunnemer, Dean for Institutional Advancement.

Cassie, who holds a B.S. degree in chemistry, comes to the university from Accent on Indianapolis, a destination management firm that produces hospitality events for conventions and corporations. Earlier she spent two years in the marketing and management of trade shows.

For University of Indianapolis alumni, she is hoping to achieve "more involvement."

"Alumni will be interested and involved in the university if we develop programs that appeal to them," Hall said.

She also has plans for encouraging the Student Alumni Association to promote campus events specifically for students. "I want students to know who I am by the time they graduate," she said. "I want them to know my name and my face while they are students here. Later, when I ask them for involvement with the university as alumni, I will be more than just an unfamiliar name on a piece of paper."

In 1991, Cassie co-founded the University of Oklahoma alumni club chapter for the Indianapolis area, a group that has expanded to 50 members, in spite of what she calls a "low membership area." In her spare time, she serves as a certified tennis umpire and has officiated at tennis tournaments for all ages—for players as young as 12 as well as for professionals.

In August she umpired for the third consecutive year at the RCA Hardcourt Championships held at the Indianapolis Tennis Center downtown. In the past she has called lines for such tennis luminaries as Jimmy Connors, Jim Courier, Pete Sampras, and Andre Agassi.
Circle K Club again dominates district awards

The University of Indianapolis chapter of the Circle K Club dominated the Indiana District Circle K awards competition last spring, capturing first place with the prestigious Club Achievement award, presented to the top club in the state.

The club also saw its fourth member since 1991 elected District Governor. Amy Johnson will serve this year, following in the shoes of predecessors Diane Bradley (1991-92) and Sandy Herre (1992-93). (Former member Kent Holoday, Jr., '92, local chapter president from 1990-91 and now a graduate student at Colorado State, was elected District Governor, Rocky Mountain District, Circle K International.)

Amy Johnson was inducted into the Society of Distinguished Collegians and was named a Distinguished District Officer.

The U of I club also received the Single Service award in the Gold Division, first place in scrapbook competition, the Circle Bulletin Editor award, and the Governor’s Project Recognition award.

Ted Folk, Food Services director, was awarded the Circle of Service award. Cindy Blackburn was inducted into the Society of Distinguished Collegians and given the Distinguished Club President award.

From Ring Cycle to roundball?

WICR to air Metropolitan Opera performances

When the Metropolitan Opera begins its new season in December, local opera buffs will listen to it on WICR 88.7 FM.

The university’s radio station received exclusive rights to air the popular program in July, according to faculty member Ed Roehling, station manager. Earlier it was heard on WAJC, the Butler radio station, which ceased operations this spring.

Joe Bickel won the Distinguished Club Vice President award. Melissa Arterberry and Johanna Philhower won the state awards for secretary and treasurer, respectively. Rebecca Ribble won Outstanding First-Year Member, Central Division.

The Circle K Club, which has garnered outstanding track records over the past three years, distinguished itself this year by contributing over 750 pounds of canned goods to Hunger, Inc., and collecting 120 pairs of shoes and several bags of clothing for Solomon’s Wardrobe. Members also raised over $1,000 in the Church World Services/Crop Walk to fight world hunger, and continued to support a young Brazilian through Compassion, International.

Clyde Fields, advisor, sees the club as one of the university’s main training grounds for student leadership and service. “The members are oriented toward service for others and inspired to exceed each previous year’s record. Outstanding freshmen are placed in key committee positions each year, and they just take on their own.”

The club is co-sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Indianapolis and the Kiwanis Club of South Indianapolis. The club’s motto, “We Build,” exemplifies their service ethic.

Class of ‘97 should have no trouble making the grade

Eighteen high school valedictorians and salutatorians were among those entering as members of a large freshman class this fall.

Full-time undergraduate day students number 1,408. In “new student” statistics involving freshmen and transfers, Admissions Director Mark Weigand reports the second highest enrollment in the school’s history: 539. Last year’s total was 518.

The number of those “admitted with distinction” has increased by four percent over last year, according to Admissions Director Mark Weigand ‘78. Students categorized as “admitted with distinction” are those who ranked in the top five percent of their high school classes, with a minimum SAT score of 1000 or a minimum ACT score of 24.

Among these high-achieving freshmen are nine Presidential Scholars and 53 Dean’s Scholars. Prerequisites are an academic ranking in the upper five percent of their class and minimum SAT scores of 1200 or minimum ACT scores of 29.

The class composition also includes three sets of twins, including two brothers who will play football for the Greyhounds.

The freshman twins are Jason and Jeffrey Sorg, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Sorg of Berne, Indiana, both of whom are Dean’s Scholars and members of the football team; Leighton and Suzanne Russo, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Russo of Carmel, Indiana; and Ty and Dustin Palmer, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Miner, newly moved to Indianapolis from San Carlos, California.

After freshmen arrived on campus, they completed final registration and met with their faculty advisors. That evening they attended the annual President’s Dinner in their honor, hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Lantz.

Student/Reflector and Oracle garner 30 journalism awards

The Student/Reflector and the Oracle earned top honors in the spring Indiana Collegiate Press Association convention at the University of Notre Dame.

The newspaper placed first for house ad, editorial cartoon, overall newspaper design, and sports story. Second-place honors came in the special issue, sports photo, and Division III Advertising of the Year categories. The paper also took third place for use of art in an ad, investigative story, and editorial writing.

The Oracle won first-place awards for endsheets, opening section, closing section and sports coverage. It placed second for organization of content, index, use of spot color, copy, use of four-color, and news/feature copy.

The Oracle also took third place for album/portrait section, cover, overall design, sports photography, coverage of student life, coverage of clubs and organizations, coverage of academics, use of theme, division pages, and in competition for Division II Yearbook of the Year.

Mary Perren, a junior and editor of the Oracle, was selected to represent the college press association as the yearbook vice president. Shariq Siddiqui was chosen as the advertising vice president, and Terri Johnson was named to one of the faculty advisor positions.
Three sixth-graders offered scholarships—but they will have to wait a few years

Three sixth-grade graduates of IPS #114 Paul I. Miller School have received scholarships for use at the University of Indianapolis in the fall of 1998, when they will presumably be eligible to enroll as freshmen. Shaun Russ has been offered a Dean's Scholarship, equal in value to half of the prevailing tuition for the day division when he enrolls, while James Engleking and Carlos Thrasher have each been offered Alumni Scholarships, equal in value to one-quarter of the prevailing tuition for the day division when they enroll.

Winners were announced at the school's commencement by President Lantz. Paul Washington-Lacey, director of the Student Development and Retention Office, and emeritus professor Bob Brooker, who has worked actively as a volunteer academic with the three students and their classmates, were on hand to congratulate the boys. The winners were acknowledged with cheers and a standing ovation by the commencement audience.

Rich Games named director for Annual Giving

Richard C. Games, a 1989 cum laude political science graduate, began new duties as director for Annual Giving on May 1.

Games is pursuing a master of arts degree in philanthropic studies at IU.

In 1991 he was named one of six national winners of a $15,000 Jane Addams Fellowship, an award given to candidates demonstrating high academic achievement, strong leadership potential, and clear involvement in voluntary services. He spent a year at the IU Center on Philanthropy.

Games was active in volunteer activities throughout high school and college. He helped care for children with tuberculosis in Haiti, built storage bins at a Navajo Indian school in New Mexico, rehabilitated low-income homes in Cincinnati, winterized low-income homes in Appalachia, and worked with developmentally disabled adults at the Noble Centers in Indianapolis.

After graduation from U of I, Games went to Benin, West Africa, with the Peace Corps, working on a project to develop safe drinking water for area residents.

In his new position Games will coordinate solicitation requests to alumni, parents, and faculty and staff, direct the traditional fall and spring phonathons, manage volunteer committees of the Annual Fund, and develop an effective plan for corporate matching gifts.

Procurement Management degree program debuts

The university now offers an AA degree and certificate degree program in Procurement Management through the School of Business. The courses meet course requirements for the Defense Department and civilian agencies of the federal government.

Dr. Donna K. Dial, program coordinator, refers to federal acquisitions as "the largest business in the world." Annual purchases of the Defense Department alone are approximately $292 billion for fiscal year 1993," she said.

Students include civilian and military personnel who manage acquisitions for the Defense Department, as well as employees of state and local governments.

Weekend courses include instruction in basic principles of procurement, contract negotiations, contract law, contract administration and cost/price analysis. Instructors include private contractors and government agency personnel.
Faculty, staff having impact on professions, community

Solomon Abebe, Education, and Brenda Sands, Purdue University, presented a paper, "Multicultural Education Model: From Ego-Ethnocentric to Global Emphasis—Instruction and Assessment Implications," at the Seventh Annual Midwest ATE Spring Conference at Effingham, Illinois. Dr. Abebe and Dr. Bob Hessong of Butler University have had an article, "Wake-Up Call on School Dropouts: Problems and Solutions" published in Teacher Education: Preparing Teachers for School Reform.

Dr. Kent D. Beeler, adjunct in Psychology, has had an article entitled "The College Student Affairs Professional as Author: Barriers and Benefits" published in the Spring 1993 College Student Affairs Journal.

Dr. Bill Dynes, English, has had an article entitled "The Trickster-Figure in Jacobean City Comedy" published in the spring issue of Studies in English Literature.

Head track coach Jerry England accepted an invitation to coach the North Team in women's track for the 1993 Olympic Festival in late July in San Antonio. England was a North Team coach for the 1982 Olympic Festival, as well as meet director for the 1982 USA vs. USSR track meet.

Judy Hasselkus, Cooperative Education, received the designation of Professional in Human Resources (PHR) from the Human Resource Certification Institute and the Society for Human Resource Management.

Christine Guyonneau, Krannert Library, gave a paper at the Online Catalog Library Center Day. She discussed her experience with FIRSTSEARCH, a new and powerful database that gives patrons access to titles of books in libraries worldwide, as well as a variety of other databases. The University of Indianapolis is the first academic institution to pioneer the project successfully.

Dr. Phylis Lan Lin, Behavioral Sciences, chaired the session "Family in Asia" and also presented a paper on "Family in Transition in Taiwan" at the Western Social Science Association meeting in Corpus Christi. Dr. Lin's presentation focused on divorce and social change in Taiwan. Dr. Lin spoke at several conferences in Chicago, St. Louis, Taipei, and Nanjing last summer.

President Benjamin Lantz received an honorary doctor of law degree from West Virginia Wesleyan College, his alma mater, in May, and also delivered the baccalaureate address. Dr. Lantz was recognized for his "rich and meaningful contributions to higher education in general and to United Methodist colleges in particular," said Wesleyan president Thomas B. Courtice.

At the annual conference of the Indiana Library Federation held last week, Pam Olston, acquisitions assistant at Krannert Memorial Library, was honored with an award naming her the 1993 outstanding library support staff member in the state.

Ed Roehling, Communications, served as a panelist, along with Leslie Olson of Channel 8 News and Roni Rucker Waters, Executive Editor of the Richmond Palladium Item, for a seminar on "Effective Public Relations for School Corporations." School corporation superintendents, administrators and principals attended.

Dr. David Wantz, Behavioral Sciences, has won the George Keller Memorial Teaching Award for the third consecutive year at the CASE Summer Institute in Communications at Notre Dame. Participants attend from all over the nation and other countries as well. Dr. Wantz taught the curriculum dealing with motivating and directing employees.

Dr. Lynne Weisenbach, dean of the School of Education, was a speaker at the Indianapolis Public Schools LEAP Summer Leadership Conference. More than 300 school administrators attended the conference, where Dr. Weisenbach gave a speech about "Great Expectations: University/School Partnerships."

Vice president and provost Lynn Youngblood's chapter of Young Audiences of Indiana (he serves as chair) was recognized as National Chapter of the Year during the national meeting of Young Audiences, Inc., in Atlanta. Last year the Young Audiences of Indiana provided a variety of arts programs in schools across the state for student audiences of approximately 250,000.
Outstanding educators receive Distinguished Alumni honors

Two outstanding University of Indianapolis alumni—both educators serving leadership roles in Indiana institutions of higher education—were honored as Distinguished Alumni during Alumni Weekend.

Dr. Stanley Warren '59, who retired last spring as dean of Academic Affairs at DePauw University, and Dr. Joanne (Baldwin) Lantz '53, chancellor at IUPU/Ft. Wayne since 1989, received awards for their professional and personal achievements at the Honors & Recognition Banquet June 5.

Dr. Warren received a B.S. degree in business education and minored in economics at Indiana Central College before earning postgraduate degrees at Indiana University, where he earned an M.A.T. in anthropology (1964), an Ed.S. in secondary education and administration (1971), and an Ed.D. in higher education (1973).

Through the years he also pursued studies at six other universities and colleges, including Oxford University.

Before receiving his doctorate he served as a case worker, high school teacher, college lecturer, and university academic counselor. Later he was associate director for Project Upward Bound at IU, director of DePauw's Black Studies program, and national Endowment for the Humanities, and the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Lantz (no relation to university president Benjamin Lantz) received a B.S. degree in physics and mathematics. She earned an M.S. degree in counseling and guidance from IU in 1957 and a Ph.D. in counseling and psychology from Michigan State in 1969.

She began her teaching career at IUPU/Ft. Wayne in 1965, moving through the academic ranks and becoming a full professor in 1980. Then, in swift order, she became department chair, assistant dean of the graduate school, associate vice chancellor and dean of academic services, interim chancellor, and chancellor.

She has held numerous offices in academic, professional, and scholarly societies and has written a number of scholarly articles, including many on the role of educated women in society. She is listed in 10 biographical works and has been honored by civic and educational organizations, including her own alma mater, which granted her an honorary doctorate in 1985. She and her husband, Wayne, are active in civic and cultural affairs in the Ft. Wayne area.

Dr. Cary L. Hanni '69 joins Board of Trustees

Dr. Cary L. Hanni '69, a medical partner of Evansville Surgical Associates, has been elected to the Board of Trustees at the University of Indianapolis. President Ben Lantz called Hanni "an outstanding alumnus and civic leader whose experience and judgment will be highly valued by the Board."

Dr. Hanni holds staff appointments at several regional hospitals, including Deaconess Hospital in Evansville, where he has served as Chief of Surgery; St. Mary's Medical Center, Evansville; and St. Francis Hospital and Health Centers and Community Hospital South, Indianapolis.

He earned his M.D. degree from Indiana University School of Medicine in 1978, receiving the American College of Surgeons Academic Award.

He is a member of the Board of Directors for the United Way of Southwestern Indiana and Vanderburgh County Medical Society, and belongs to the Midwest Vascular Surgical Society, Midwestern Surgical Society, and American College of Surgeons.

He and his wife, Vicki, live in Evansville with their five children.
The University of Indianapolis and Indiana University have signed an agreement with the government of the Dominican Republic in which the two universities gained exclusive rights to search two areas off the Dominican coast thought to be the underwater grave of Christopher Columbus-era vessels.

President Benjamin Lantz signed the two-year research contract, which gives the two universities the right to excavate finds, then duplicate and exhibit the materials.

The project is being funded by university, private and Dominican monies, Lantz said. He estimated the cost of the project at $225,000. Any artifacts found would be displayed at the University of Indianapolis in a mini-exhibit. The city's Children's Museum, which is already home to numerous 17th- and 18th-century artifacts, would eventually show the treasures in a major exhibit. The Dominican Republic would retain ownership rights.

Ships used by the crews of Christopher Columbus in the early 1490s were sunk by back-to-back hurricanes. Eight such wooden caravels are thought to be preserved in the rich sediment off the north coast of the Dominican Republic, specifically in the Bay of Santa Isabela and south of Saona Island. None of the sunken Columbus vessels has been recovered to date.

The diving project began last summer, with about 20 divers working at a time. Others involved in the project include researchers, anthropologists, biologists, linguists, and historians.

Crimson & Grey Day brings Olympian Hayes Jones, special honors to Greyhound greats

Hayes W. Jones, winner of the 1964 Olympic Gold Medal for the 110-meter hurdles and bronze medalist for the same event in 1960, was the featured speaker at the Crimson & Grey Day luncheon.

Crimson & Grey Day is an annual event honoring all letterwinners. After the luncheon, participants watched the Hounds beat St. Joseph's College in football, then headed to a post-game barbecue.

Tom Zupancic, a former Greyhound athlete, was honored at the event.

Lisa Precourt named 1993 Esch Scholar

Lisa Precourt, a senior Spanish Education major from Valparaiso, was named the 1993-94 Esch Scholar during the opening convocation of the new academic year.

The award recognizes a senior who has excelled both academically and in service to the school. It is named in honor of former university president Dr. I. Lynd Esch, whose 25 years of presidency (1945-70) emphasized high academic standards and a commitment to service.

In recognizing Lisa, President Ben Lantz said her selection "epitomizes the highest we can expect at this university."

A Presidential Scholar, Lisa holds a GPA of 4.028. She will student-teach next semester at Ben Davis High School.

She is captain of the women's tennis team, a three-year resident assistant in Cravens Hall, a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and a Presidential Assistant, and is listed in Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Academic honors include membership in Alpha Chi, Phi Alpha Epsilon, and Iota Omega language honor society, and placement on the Dean's List and Honor Roll.

Player, coach, teacher Ray Crowe celebrated as legend in new book

An autograph session honoring Ray Crowe '38, was held in celebration of the publication of The Ray Crowe Story: A Legend in High School Basketball. The book is about Crowe's legendary days here on campus and the following 28 years he spent in the IPS system as a coach, teacher, and administrator.

Crowe, an honorary member of the university's Board of Trustees, is recognized statewide and nationally as an outstanding educator, athlete, and gentleman.

Also attending the autograph session were former Crispus Attucks high school players who had been coached by Crowe, including Oscar "Big O" Robertson, Bailey "Flap" Robertson (Indiana Central's all-time leading scorer), Willie "Bull" Gardner, Hallie Bryant, Winford "Wimp" O'Neal, Bill Hampton (another Indiana Central player), Ed Searcy, Cleveland Harp, Ludwig Johnson, and Bill "Pluto" Mason.

If you wish to purchase an autographed copy of The Ray Crowe Story, send inquiries to High School Basketball Cards of America, 6535 E. 82nd St., Suite 204, Indianapolis, IN 46250, or call 1-800-765-5075.
Encouraging employment news from this year’s grads

by Paul Gabonay
Director, Career Services

Of course it is too early to tell how the Class of '93 will fare in the job market. The last three years have been especially difficult for new graduates, and the time it takes to land an appropriate job seems to get longer and longer. Nevertheless, congratulations to the Career Services registrants and former Cooperative Education participants who reported success in finding jobs. Here's what we've learned so far:

Full-time teaching contracts were awarded to 17 of our School of Education graduates: Susan Pollard, John Venter, Barbara Wagner, Paige Balka, Tammy Baker, Kristy Sears, Sandra Herre, Dana Denney, Lori Morgan, Christine Geible, Lisa Harshbarger, Evelyn Karozos, Scott Whitlock, Jan Evans, Lori Morgan, Celisa Lewis, and Jay Vahle. Dana Denney and Celisa Lewis have the distinction of traveling the farthest to secure employment: Dana now works for the San Antonio Independent School District in Texas, and Celisa teaches in a Newark, New Jersey, city school. These graduates attribute part of their job search success to Career Services Office job bulletins, teacher fairs, candidate directories, and credential mailings.

You can help!

A student’s perspective of life 'in the field'—and a note from the co-op director

by Dan Plasterer, junior math major

As a paid actuarial intern at AUL this summer, I gained valuable experience with the latest actuarial software. Most of my work projects were done on the computer, so I learned data-entry and other PC skills. I worked with some of the best actuaries in Indianapolis, who "showed me the ropes." Even though their own projects kept them very busy, they made time to help me with my projects and with questions I had about their profession.

I guess the best part of the job was that my supervisor, Brenda Kay Smith, gave me flexibility and leeway to perform and learn from the tasks she assigned to me. Instead of giving direct answers to questions I had about various projects, she would point me in the right direction and allow me to learn and grow as an actuarial student.

It wasn't all serious business at AUL, though. Almost every Friday we celebrated someone's birthday in my department with a small party! On Wednesdays I played in the AUL golf league with several other actuaries. We had a "Casual Day." All the employees shed their usual business suits and dresses and donned their favorite pair of Levi's and a T-shirt.

With the help and support of the cooperative education staff and everyone at AUL, I came upon a grand opportunity. I gained invaluable experience (as well as a substantial résumé builder) that will come in really handy when I graduate from the University of Indianapolis. If it weren't for this opportunity I would have spent the summer at home working some dead-end job instead of here in Indianapolis getting a head start on my career aspirations.

Dear Alumni:

You can assist co-op students like Dan prepare for their futures. Here are a few ways you can help:

- Provide leads on possible co-ops, paid internships, or part-time positions with your employer.
- Hire a student to assist you in your department or business.
- Advise the cooperative education office of summer opportunities with your employer.
- Spend some time with a student who is researching possible career choices.
- Speak with groups of co-op students about your career field.
- Write an article about your career experience for our co-op newsletter.

We would like to hear from you. Contact the Office of Cooperative Education & Student Employment at 788-3531.

Warm regards,

Judy Hasselkus
Director, Cooperative Education

New School of Business alumni have taken jobs in a variety of areas—bank management, health care sales/marketing, business association membership development, beverage distribution, real estate, insurance, and publishing. Tony Graham went to work as a wine sales consultant for a company in Hawaii, thanks to a helping hand from his uncle, a resident there. Correy Terrell accepted a position with a South Carolina accounting firm. Carolyn Cary and Scott Saunders, also accounting program graduates, found employment with local CPA firms Blue & Company and R. J. File & Company (the university's auditor). Scott Richardson was tapped by alumnus Greg Bixler for Mid States Insurance with help from golf coach Ken Partridge.

In all, 21 School of Business baccalaureate graduates have notified the Career Center of their employment: Ryan Saubine, Jeff Andry, Hope Leonard, Shari Smith, Greg Griffin, Phil Gramaglia, Chad Casinelli, Chris Johnson, Julie Taylor, Brad Miller, Madllen Manashi, Scott Wood, Lynn Suroviak, Amy Thoman, Bryan Huffman, and Brad Grandstaff. MBA graduate Laura Gwalney and associate degree graduate Shirley Banker also notified Career Services of their new jobs with Dun and Bradstreet and Gray, Robinson, Eckert & Ryan (attorneys-at-law), respectively. Cooperative Education assignments, previous positions with their companies, university co-sponsored job fairs, campus job vacancy bulletins, the newspaper, and personal networking led to these opportunities.

Math/physics major Steve Martin is working as a customer service manager for Intat Precision, Inc. of Rushville, and psychology major Debra (Smith) Bowline is employed as a psychological testing technician by Ingwel Psychological Services of Indianapolis. Art major Nelson Hygema has begun his career with The Flyer newspaper. Chemistry grads Kofi Oppung, Augustine Osuna, and Corina Taffian are working at Dow Elanco and Eli Lilly. Cindy Grubb is attending graduate school at Illinois State, and Kathy Welch is enrolled in the Indiana University Medical School.

We are eager to hear from other members of the Class of '93 regarding their employment, graduate school or other circumstances. We would also like to remind alumni of our candidate referral service. We are happy to refer candidates for positions in your organizations, and to assist you in your career planning and job seeking. QE2 cruise to launch Chorale on tour of England, Scotland

by Dennis Soughon

In the summer of 1992, as many of you may remember, several U of I students, faculty, and alumni took a two-week tour of some of the most beautiful parts of France, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy while representing the university. They enjoyed such cities as Geneva, Chamonix, Florence, Venice, Innsbruck, and Zurich. While performing concerts of sacred and folk music for people of many different cultures, they discovered that one could truly share an international bond with people of another culture—by sharing their love of music.

If you missed that chance to enjoy the company and camaraderie this group enjoyed, here’s another opportunity for you to discover this international bond for yourself. The Music Department is sending out the call to students, faculty, staff, alumni, family, and friends to travel to Europe again!

On June 13, 1994, the U of I Festival Chorale will depart on the famous QE2 ocean liner for a two-week concert tour of England and Scotland. The QE2 is one of the largest, most luxurious ocean liners that sails the Atlantic Ocean, and the Chorale will have the opportunity to rehearse, sing, relax, and enjoy all of the amenities aboard this beautiful vessel.

Following a five-day voyage embarking from New York, the Chorale will land in Southampton, England, and begin the tour of England and Scotland. While on tour, the Chorale will visit and perform in various churches and cathedrals, including the 14th-century New Battle Abbey outside of Edinburgh. At some locations, the Chorale will be hosted by English and Scottish choirs and will combine with them to perform English Cathedral music and works by American composers—truly demonstrating the international bond of music.

Who: Students, faculty, staff, alumni, family, friends—we need clappers as well as singers!

What: Five days on the QE2, eight or nine days in England and Scotland, one day flying home.

When: Leave for New York to board the QE2 ocean liner June 13.

Where: It all starts with rehearsals in the new Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center on the U of I campus.

How: Contact Dr. Krasnovsky at (317) 783-9996 or the Music Department at (317) 788-3255.

Music: Rehearsals will be every Tuesday evening in May, with one or two Saturday retreats (tapes of the rehearsals and music will be available for those out-of-state travelers who cannot make it to the rehearsals).

Money: The tour cost, including tickets and hotels, is $2400 at this point—but inflation and advance bookings could increase the cost slightly.

Degree programs for paramedics, radiographers begin

The University of Indianapolis now offers a core program of undergraduate courses leading to an Associate of Science degree for radiographers and paramedics. The radiology program is available to persons who have graduated from an accredited hospital-based radiography program and who are licensed by the state.

The radiology program is available to persons who have graduated from an accredited hospital-based radiography program and who are licensed by the state.

The paramedic program is open to those who successfully completed a 1,300-hour state-approved program, are certified according to state and national standards, and are employed as paramedics.

“Both programs have been designed for health science professionals who desire to advance their careers and enhance their professionalism,” said Dr. Sharon Isaac, acting dean of the School of Nursing. The programs were developed as the result of a demand in the Indianapolis area, she noted.

The University of Indianapolis will be the only institution in the state offering an associate degree to radiographers who were trained through a hospital-based certification program, Isaac said. Currently Ball State University offers a similar program for paramedics through an affiliation with Methodist Hospital. St. Vincent Hospitals and Health Centers offer the pre-degree accredited programs for paramedics, and Community Hospitals offer such pre-degree programs for both radiographers and paramedics.

International celebration features 'Flag Day,' dinner

This year’s Celebration of the Flags, an event that pays tribute to the contributions of the international students and faculty on campus, saw the hanging of flags from 56 nations. One hundred twenty-four students hail from other countries this semester.

Following the September 24 ceremony, the International Dinner celebrated the culture of Taiwan and Mainland China.

University loses great friend in Evan R. Kek

Editor's Note: Shortly before press time of the most recent issue of the Alumni News, we received notice of the passing of Evan R. Kek, and made all-too-brief mention of it in the Personal section. Many of you wrote to encourage us to pay proper tribute. We thank Dr. Carmony for accepting our invitation to acknowledge Evan Kek’s place in the university’s history.

Evan R. Kek, son of J. A. and Lucy Kek, was born at Collins, Indiana, December 5, 1909. His father was a minister in the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. Evan entered Indiana Central College in September 1926, and was graduated with a major in history in 1930.

Like many students of that period, he worked to pay a significant part of his college costs, which then averaged roughly $300 per semester for tuition, board, lodging, and miscellaneous items. Before graduation he served two years as manager of the college bookstore. Shortly thereafter he became an assistant in the treasurer’s office, soon became treasurer, and continued as such until his resignation in 1955. He also taught courses in history and economics, and received a master’s degree in history from Indiana University in 1939.

On December 12, 1930, Evan married Anna Dale, who was graduated from Indiana Central in 1928. As an undergraduate she served as secretary to President J. J. Good, and continued as such for a time thereafter until she became registrar. She also taught courses in Latin, and received a master’s degree in Latin from Indiana University in 1935 and a doctorate in Latin from Cornell University in 1941. After travel in Europe in 1955-1956, the Keks served Davis and Elkins College, a Presbyterian-supported school at Elkins, West Virginia, in somewhat the same manner they had served Indiana Central College.

From the mid-twenties until the mid-fifties Indiana Central College, sponsored by the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, emerged from its infancy. It achieved increasing patronage and respect as a small liberal arts college, mainly educating teachers and ministers. New buildings were erected and the campus was enlarged.

Three individuals in particular contributed ably, generously, and sacrificially to the growth and augmented stature of Indiana Central College. They were: President J. J. Good, Evan R. Kek, and Anna Dale Kek.

Many are the accounts from alumni of having payments delayed so they could remain in school, and of making payments in kind, even with potatoes and turkeys. Not generally known is that on occasion Evan helped borrow money on his own security to pay salaries and other obligations.

While in Florida in January of this year, I had the pleasure of a delightful visit with Evan and Anna Dale Kek. In Evan’s death I lost a long and very valued friend. Also, graduates of Indiana Central College and the University of Indianapolis have lost one who contributed mightily to the advancement and quality of their alma mater.

Lisa Hicks to coach Lady Greyhound basketball team

Lisa Hicks, women’s basketball coach at Manchester College, has been named to succeed the late Chuck Mallender as coach of the U of I women’s basketball team.

She comes to Indianapolis after an impressive five-year stint at Manchester, where she led the Spartans to an 82-52 record and four winning seasons, in the process becoming the winningest women's coach in the college's history. She becomes the fourth coach in the Lady Greyhounds’ 15-year women’s basketball history, succeeding Coach Chuck Mallender, who passed away last season (see page 15).

Hicks guided her 1992-93 team to an 18-5 record for the school’s best winning percentage ever. Her 1991-92 squad set a school mark with 21 victories, with her teams advancing to the NAIA playoffs the past two seasons.

Under Hicks’ leadership, Manchester received votes in both the NCAA III and NAIA national polls for the first time in school history.

Indiana General Assembly honors Coach Mallender

Chuck Mallender, the university's winningest women's basketball coach, has been honored posthumously by the Indiana General Assembly:

WHEREAS, Chuck Mallender, who died Monday, February 22, 1993, spent the last 11 years coaching the University of Indianapolis women's basketball team to a 198-108 record; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Mallender, who was 66 years old when he died, was married to his wife, Tina, for 43 years and had six children; and

WHEREAS, Chuck was a dedicated husband and father; and

WHEREAS, when his children became interested in sports, Mr. Mallender instituted youth football, baseball, softball, and basketball at the Baxter YMCA;

WHEREAS, when Mr. Mallender's youngest daughter, Linda, became a member of the Southport High School girls' basketball team, Chuck tutored them, studying every tape and book he could find to make basketball fundamentals like a second language; and

WHEREAS, the Southport girls' basketball team dedicated their 1980 state championship to him; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Mallender will be greatly missed by his family, friends, and the community.

Now, therefore: Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, the Senate concurring:

SECTION 1. That the Indiana General Assembly honors and pays tribute to Chuck Mallender for the many and varied contributions he made to the University of Indianapolis, the youth of today, and his community. That the State of Indiana is a much better place for his having passed this way.

SECTION 2. That on behalf of the people of the State of Indiana, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family of Chuck Mallender.

SECTION 3. That the Principal Clerk of the House of Representatives shall transmit a copy of this Resolution to Chuck Mallender's wife, Tina.

Memories of Professor Roland Nelson

by Diane Metheny. Copies of the full text may be obtained by notifying the registrar's office.

Twenty-seven years ago, I walked into Room 17 in Lilly Science Hall on the campus of Indiana Central College and came face to face with Roland Nelson for the first time. Our first meeting was anything but auspicious. As a matter of fact, within five minutes of walking into that classroom, my classmates and I were on the verge of walking out and marching to the registrar's office to drop our first graduate history class. Our reason? Within those first five minutes Dr. Nelson handed out the course syllabus!

For those of you who had Roland Nelson as a teacher, I don't need to say anything more. For the rest of you, let me explain. Professor Nelson's syllabus included the following requirements: two "short" term papers of 6-10 pages each, two annotated bibliographies of at least 15 entries each, at least two oral presentations—not counting the almost daily debates and panel presentations, and three—well, maybe only two—essay exams—along with daily assignments from a text and a book of readings—all in a seven-week summer session! How unreasonable could a teacher be!

We soon learned that the man we initially thought was so unreasonable was one of the most reasonable people we had ever met. This nonjudgmental, philosophical man with the marvelous wit guided, coaxed, and inspired us—the first graduate history students at Indiana Central College—through the new Master of Arts program. He continually challenged us to become more thoughtful writers, better prepared speakers, more critical readers. And as is often the case when a master teacher works his magic in the classroom, he was successful much of the time. We simply didn't want to displease this man who had such high expectations of his students. And when we did succeed in any way—whether by writing a good critique of an article or surviving a debate with him—albeit battered and bruised—he was genuinely pleased, as are all great teachers when their students learn to believe in their abilities and to achieve beyond their expectations.

Roland Nelson worked tirelessly to make his classes fresh, relevant, and interesting—and maybe just a bit irreverent. Even his lectures were memorable. They might have been about the future . . . or about a day in the life of John Q. Peasant . . . or about the balance between liberty and control . . . or about the anatomy of a revolution . . . or my favorite, "presidents who might have been," but they were always creative, often very exciting, certainly never routine. They were sprinkled with anecdotes that brought history to life, and they were seasoned with a wit that was as funny as it was brilliant. Dr. Nelson never took history or life—or himself—too seriously, and he was amused by those who did.

As I have reminisced about the hours I spent in Roland Nelson's classroom, I recalled how much he relished a good debate about causation in history. He would lead us in probing into the reasons an event occurred? What if Lincoln had not been president? What if there had been no war? What if some event had not happened . . . its derivation, its advent. What gave it its impetus? What was the catalyst that brought it about? Why did the event occur at a particular time or place in history? And he was fascinated by the "what ifs" in history. What if some event had not occurred? What if Lincoln had not been shot? What if Henry Clay had been elected president? What if there had been no slavery in the South?

In these last few days I've played the "why" and "what if" games. Dr. Nelson taught me so well: Why did I choose to take his class in 1966? What unseen force took me to that place? What if I had turned around and walked out of his class that first day? I have no answers to any of these questions. I just know that on a day 27 years ago I met a man who became my teacher, colleague, and friend—and that knowing him has been one of the blessings of my life.
The Unmasking of a Phantastic Trip!!

The PHANTOM of the OPERA

THE Musical by Andrew Lloyd Webber

Saturday, February 12, 1994

This international phenomenon, Andrew Lloyd Webber's The Phantom of the Opera, has dazzled standing-room-only audiences the world over and is coming to take your breath away. Join us as we travel to Louisville's Kentucky Center for the Arts and enjoy "The Music of the Night."

We will depart from Nicson Hall at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, February 12, 1994, and travel to downtown Louisville. You will be on your own for lunch, but we will have a list of restaurants near the theatre to choose from. The show begins at 2:00 p.m. and we will return to Indy immediately following the production. We will stop for dinner on the way home and be back on campus at approximately 9:00 p.m.

Cost for the trip is $68 per person and includes deluxe motorcoach transportation and reserved seating in the Orchestra section. Space is limited to 46, so make your reservations today!

ROAD TRIP III: RETURN TO CHICAGO

The city has had a year to recover, so we're returning to Chicago for another fantastic U of I Alumni trip. We will be on Michigan Avenue for the opening of the Annual Holiday Light Festival, as well as visit the Shedd Aquarium and, as always, do some serious shopping!

Depart: 7:30 a.m. Saturday, November 20
Return: 7:00 p.m. Sunday, November 21

We will travel via deluxe motorcoach, leaving from and returning to Nicson Hall parking lot. Overnight accommodations will once again be at the Forum Hotel, 525 North Michigan Avenue.

Cost: $87 per person/based on double occupancy. Single occupancy will be $134 per person. Cost includes transportation and lodging. Meals and museum admission are not included.
