Is Pride in Flag a Thing of the Past?

Has pride in and respect for the American flag become a thing of the past? Signs of this seem to be evident on our campus.

Have you noticed the tattered flag which flies from the pole on the northeast side of the Administration Building? How many people stand with their full attention on Old Glory when the National Anthem is played at athletic contests? What is the number of students who remain standing the entire time "The Star-Spangled Banner" is being sung?

What do the Stars and Stripes mean to you an American citizen? Is the flag merely a piece of material to you or does it symbolize the power and prestige of our nation?

These questions may seem trivial, but just how trivial is pride in the standard of the United States of America?

With these three questions ever, don't let something that you have saluted since elementary school become a meaningless habit in your life.

Spring Fever Hits Wilmore; Water Balloons, Campus Cops

A special dorm meeting was called April 22 to inform the residents of Wilmore Hall that there has been a problem with the Campus Cops. It seems that they have been throwing water balloons on all the dormitories in the past few weeks. The Campus Cops, under the direction of a personal guidance involved because of the rash of parking tickets that have been issued recently, are now suspected of being the culprits. It seems that some of the officers have been thrown on the windows of the dorms and the stories I have heard, some of the officers are following a pattern.

I feel that the problem stems from two sources. First, spring in Wilmore is upon us and it seems that the months of campus pressure, the best time to relieve these pressures, is upon us. We have been called childish by the authorities, but, in my mind, would not last to the time when we were juniors and seniors, many would be a certain copy of themselves. Some even might not fail to think.

Secondly, the fact that several things have been stolen from cars this last might have caused some antagonistic feelings toward the cops. I realize that the campus is quite large and it is hard to patrol adably, but when cars have more than a tire taken something seems to be going on.

In the coming issues of the Reflector I hope to continue this column to keep those who are on campus better informed as to those things that are going on in the campus. I also hope to answer questions about some of the actions taken by the police and on certain problems. I feel that I can do this by being a productive planning session. The names of these questions will be published.

"It is my personal feeling that any student has the right to know about the actions of the administration or faculty on any matter which might affect the opinions, campus life, etc., of the student body. The only way that I can do this is to have a productive planning session. The names of these questions will be published."

There are many questions today about the introduction of the fiberglass pole into the pole vaulting world and of the validity of this event. Among these questions are the following:

1. Should the users of the fiberglass pole be given full credit for their vaulting accomplishments or should they be credited with the manufacturers of the pole?

2. Could Cornelius Warnerbora vault 19 ft. with the fiberglass pole if he were at his peak physical condition?

3. What will be the apex of vaulting, or is there one?

I recently read an article about pole vaulting in the March 1963 issue of the Greyhound which stated that in 1952 five men had achieved the improbable feat of vaulting more than 18 ft. All of these men were using the controversial fiberglass pole. Some of these men had advanced their vaulting height more than one foot higher by the use of the fiberglass pole. In an advertisement for this pole it states: "Then as the Sky Dome reaches a 40 degree angle it starts throwing the vault up with a much greater velocity. With the foregoing information in mind I refer back to the original question: could Cornelius Warnerbora vault 19 ft. with the fiberglass pole? I believe that the pole could be given full credit for their vaulting accomplishments or should they share the credit with the manufacturer of the pole?

I decided to ask for some opinions about this question and the other two questions. I felt that the most logical person to call were persons who were connected with the pole vaulting event. I questioned Angus Nicoson, head track coach of the Greyhounds, about this point, and this was his reply:

"If we are going to take the full credit away from the users of the fiberglass pole, then we should make sure that the suppliers of the same are given full credit for their vaulting accomplishments."

"Twenty-one years ago a record was shattered in the pole vaulting event. A twenty-one year old school teacher poured himself over the bar set at 5 ft. 8 in. to set a new world record. This is not the complete story, however, because he had used a homemade pole with wooden hand grips, with strength, power and timing.

This man's name was Cornelius Warnerbora and he vaulted 19 ft. with such a pole. The athletic world was in an uproar. People were saying that a man could not have achieved such a feat. Others said that technology should be given credit for this success. This man vaulted 19 ft. with a homemade pole, and the fiberglass pole could be given full credit for their vaulting accomplishments or should they share the credit with the manufacturer of the pole?"

I decided not to ask for more opinions about this question and the other two questions. I did not call anyone else about this question, and the other two questions. Honesty, Abe
by Jerry Derash

Have you heard the joke about the sidewalk? You should. It's all over town. This is a joke my friend, Abe, told me.

I remember telling jokes of that kind when I was the same age. Everyone goes through a阶段 about the kangaroo and the penguin. Neither have.

Or maybe you remember these school chuckles. What's green and answers to “Where were you?”

I was lying about the wheels.

And the joke about the trap who had a siss. He had a forms. “Abe.”

Everybody laughed at this one. And I know my mind can be found in saying it straight.

A trap came up to me the other day and said he hadn’t a wire for days so I gave him something to eat.

For one of these cute things isn’t worth repeating. They are just some of the necessary evils that one has to go through during his stay on earth. This brings up a point I’m sure you know. It is just a musical tryout to sing in God’s choir? I saw a joke the other day about a man who has a bush. On a tombstone it read: Here lies a man who all dressed up and no place to go.

Each time I type one joke it re- turns to me. I realize I swear. All the siss- comes out in a jumbled mess. It’s hard to keep everything systematic when day by day you must start a new column. (There was a joke about that.)

A man was in the hospital, waiting to undergo a serious operation. He was not too sure about the whole thing. As the surgeon started cutting up, the patient opened his eyes and said, “I’ve just found myself in a dark room with all the ‘chairs’ filled.” “A joke,” the surgeon said.

Asdell, Crafton Place

Bill Asdell and Clark Cauton were the only members of Central College’s delegation to attend the Indiana University Student Assembly held April 27. Asdell high jumped to a first and Cauton threw the javelin for a fourth. Indiana Central ran against such teams as Berea College, Ohio State, Miami of Ohio, Northwestern University, Purdue, Indiana State, Butler State and Wabash. The ICC track men found the competition stiff. The meet could serve two purposes. One, give the track men the competition needed to help them improve; two, let them from getting “big heads.”

Counselor Available

At Crafton Place, the ICC Central College has announced that beginning Monday morning, April 30, a counselor will be on duty in the Evening Division offices each evening until 8:30 p.m. Any college students or members of the Evening Division will be able to get counseling without having to wait until the morning hours.

Letter to the Editor

Evermann (George Schwartz) realizes his guilt as he kneels in contrition, Schwartz and the rest of the cast for the morality playEveryman recently returned from taking it on a tour of Indiana.

A citizen should be aware of the ideals of a religion. Christianity, for example, extends to us a code of ethics which we can apply in government. The story of the four men of God standing on the deck of a sinking war-ship while their life-jackets were used to save drowning service-men is a paramount example of religious ethics in conjunction with our country. They saw the need for preservation of their country which parallels, the ideals of their respective religions.

A citizen should practice "righteous indignation," the bolt in all kinds of current jargon about "morals which is being done.

The day of riding furiously through the countryside warning citizens to keep themselves in mind is over. Our, unlike the "red coats" of our early days, is not so easily perceived, but an equal peril. Communal solidarity underlies the whole; it seeks, like some vigorous herb, a chance on which it may hide itself and breed its own kind. Citizens of to-day must be more vigilant than ever before in their history. The only way of giving ourselves keener "juxtaposition" is by education. We must know the issues, air our views and take pride in what is ours—one of these can be realized without education.

I hope I have satisfied some of the public with, if not the right; concept of citizenship, the only way to discover what a citizen is and the manner to affirm their views about it.

Respectfully yours,
Edward A. Blythe, Jr.

Exploring Space By Relativity

Can you read this number, 2,450,000,000,000? It is read as two trillion, four hundred and fifty billion. One trillion is one thousand billion and represents the number of miles we would move in a year if we traveled continuously at the speed of light. If we were to travel at the speed of light for one thousand years, we would be able to see one of the nearest stars. Of course, it would take one billion years to travel to the nearest star neighbor. How- ever, even more astonishing.

If we were to travel at the speed of light for one thousand years, we would be able to see one of the nearest stars. Of course, it would take one billion years to travel to the nearest star neighbor. How- ever, even more astonishing.

After participating in all of these activities, rest awhile and have some refreshments sold by the Donor Club.

Then enjoy the rest of the booths sponsored by HEDIM Club, Trinitie School, Freshman Class, Business Club, Crimson Bopper, Philadelp- hia and New Britton. You will have paid your five dollar fee but which ever number you decide to rest, will they rest. All five dollar fees from the twenty-one booths will be ap- plied toward the expenses of the Junior Donor Banquet.

Don’t forget - It’s the Junior Carnival on May 11. There will be fun for all. You all come!
