BRAINS IN COMBAT

Class Brains Match Wits

The battle of the brains (quiz show) squared off last Friday, Feb. 19, during chapel com-vocation when the juniors met the seniors. Future pairings reveal the freshmen against the sophomore, and the survivors of these two matches will move to the semi-cultural catalogues.

There are numerous items, estential to full college participation, for which other institutions charge special fees that are included in the one comprehensive

I CC Welcomes Science Fair

The thirteenth annual Regional Science Fair of central Indiana was held at Indiana Central College on Mar. 20 and 21. This fair is sponsored by Indiana Central College and The Indianapolis News with cooperating sponsors. The elementary division will be on March 20 with the junior and senior division on March 21.

Dr. Robert M. Brooker is in charge of the event with Jim Re-ner student chairman. Associate directors are Larry Darlage and Gary Palmer with Dick Rodebaugh and Bob Dick as assistants. Other persons in charge are the Science, John L. Steinly, Sue Findey, and Peggy Wright. There are a total of fifty students who will be helping set up exhibits, typing, and many other activities.

Dr. Brooker has stated that the quantity and quality of the exhibits has increased each year. The number of booths has been reached 1,000. This year the stress will be on the quality of the exhibits.

Anthology Affords Teachers Opportunities To Create

All college students are cordially invited to consider their work for publication in the Annual Anthology of College Poetry, sponsored by the Poetry Press.

The recognition afforded by publication will reflect definite credit on the college, as well as afford satisfaction to those who may see their work in print, and contribute to the literature of others of their own attainments.

The student's name, home address and telephone number should be printed on each entry submitted. Failure to list either will disqualify the entry.

Much as space is limited, more possibilities can be created by a shorter poem.

This project creates spontaneous interest among the students, and stimulates scholarly competition.

During the past ten years, college throughout the country have formed Ia and published anthologies of students' poems and manuscripts, of which about one thousand have been published. We shall be very glad to see the work of the students. Closing date for submission of manuscripts is April 10. For further information see Prof. Bay Warden.

ONE WILL WIN — L. to R., John Wiggins, Steve Tonn, William Dorlarge, and Richard Lewis. They are also among the more than 100 students who submitted manuscripts for the 1965 campus Anthology of College Poetry at Indiana Central College.

Students Encourage Department Expansion

(Edited note: The purpose of this opinion poll was to create student interest in the development of our school and to underline or criticize any particular department or member of the faculty.)

By Jane Berrymann

Eight hundred copies of an opinion poll were handed out into mail boxes Wednesday, Feb. 20. Out of the 600 some-what hurriedly completed ballots, the results were interesting, "to say the least. We came to the conclusion that much from the complaints' heard everyday in the lunch line, campus board or outside of a class was due to the fact that the students continually complained about the quality of service. We tried to get a clear answer for these complaints have you answered none or correct. If you, a and returned the opinion poll, you participated in a mass effort to draw the attention of the faculty and the students to the problems of the present system as seen from the student's point of view.

Not all departments received the exact amount of votes, but some of them were close to the number of votes. The Communications department received the highest amount of votes, while the History department received the lowest amount of votes.

Dear Editor,

We felt that at the Feb. 12th modern jazz church program the majority of Indian Central students were put out of their minds with the feelings of 'runingness.' We feel that college life should be filled with an attitude of fun and encourage self-disciplined openness in management.

Surely the constant schedule forced laughs, and ridiculous expressions of some students showed ignorance on the part. We will grant that a few laughable passages did arise, but the presentation didn't deserve the giggles "no "no" which seemed to be the sentiments of most students. Such attitudes most likely leave the student with a numbed impression of our college - 'the college being the students.' We feel that behavior is not the best part of your college. One enthusiastic backing of the basketball team.

However, this letter was not written only for the purpose of criticizing this particular student organization. It is hoped that other chapel programs may meet with more prudence discretion on the part of the Indian Central Student Body.

Dear Editor,

We have noticed certain problems arising on the campus, while there is a need for more discussion in the class setting a perfect example for the defacing of school property.

Steve's Notes On Wrestling

The defending Little State Champions, Indiana Central will take on a strong contingent of Hoosier small colleges in the outstanding wrestling tourney in the state.

Tournament notices will be posted.

Central's wrestling team has done an outstanding job this season, but they need your support. If they are to capture the championship for the second year in a row...

Remember: Little State Wrestling Tourney on February 25.

Indiana Central wrestlers journeyed to the University of Illinois on February 10 to face their toughest opponent to date. The lopsided score does not indicate a complete and total defeat for Central. Five of the seven defeats recorded had three or more points spread.

With a strong contingent of seasoned upper-classmen, Central competitors had an advantage of considerable experience. Wrestlers with only one season, four juniors, and three sophomores... the freshmen... Hoosier Central, turned in a fine showing in a tournament which took place... up to their usual high standard.

Two wrestlers deserve special mention. Larry Walls, a true freshman, turned a superior performance in a closely contested 1-7 victory over a Central wrestler. The win... in the close-up slight decision. Larry Walls... with his usual high standard.

Two freshmen...

Day Graves, continuing his usual form, is a graduate of the school... a wrestling team, a steady, controlled match, emerging a 3-0 victor.

Day Graves, one of the top wrestling schools in the nation, picked up a 31-10 victory over Central's Gym, Feb. 6.

Fighting with a determined aggressiveness...
