The time is out of joint—O cursed spite, that ever I was born to set it right.

Hamlet Stage, Crews, Cast, Ready for Public Performances on November 13-14 and 15

Hamlet will be presented by the Indiana Central Players at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 13, 14, and 15 under the direction of Michael A. Williams, assistant professor of Drama. Hamlet, King of Denmark, will be portrayed by Charles Eckert, a senior, while Laertes will be portrayed by Jeffery Beible, and Ophelia, by Joyce Johnson, a sophomore. Miss Johnson, who headed Indiana Central’s Dramatics for many years, will again be responsible for sound effects and wardrobe, 言語が理解できない

The Editor Speaks

Late last year the Drama Department and Prof Williams decided to take on the task of presenting Hamlet to the student body of Indiana Central. After many long weeks and days of hard work, the job is almost done. A job that many fell was "An impossible dream in the quality of production." But the Drama Department on the try mendous job that it has done. I am sure that each and every one of you will enjoy the benefits of this production. On be half of the Reflector I would like to wish the Drama Depart ment a huge success on this major production.

Plan now to attend and don't miss this production. See it in Ransburg Auditorium on Nov. 13, 14 and 15. Curtain time is 8:00 P.M.

See you there!

I would also like to congratulate the Admissions Depart ment on the success of High School Day this year. Much work went into the program which was evident by the over all program.

In this issue of the Reflector you will find the results of the first all school poll. This poll was taken on the service organizations — Beta Theta and Lambda-Chi. Both frats were opposed to the poll, but were unsuccessful in their attempts to censure the poll. "Freedom of the press wins again."

The purpose of the poll was two-fold:

1. Determine whether or not the organizations are fulfilling their roll of service.
2. Learn student feeling in regard to social fraternities on campus.

The results are printed, we will let you form your own opinions.

If you have any comments in regard to the above, feel free to contact the Reflector.

COUNCIL KEYHOLE

After several months of negotiations the following Student Discounts and special priced tickets have been obtained for students of Indiana Central College.

Several discounts have been discontinued since last year and I would appreciate your noting which ones are so that we can avoid any mis-understandings.

The business firms named below have gone to considerable lengths to make these dis counts and special priced tickets available to our students and I would encourage you to take advantage of them. You can obtain considerable savings by patronizing these businesses.

Have you ever wondered why the students at Indiana Central College select one person? Perhaps, knowing your own reasons for at tending Indiana Central, you have much to say about why others decided to come here. Yet, the question is of some significance to you personal ly since students' reasons for attending an institution may play an important role in determining the nature of campus and academic life. For example, Indiana Central differs from three of the four other colleges in Indiana by virtue of its religious affiliation and orientation. Do students attend because they desire a Christian-oriented education? In an effort to obtain more information in this area, questionnaires were made available in the General Psychology course during the first week of the second semester. The results of the survey may provide an indication of the possibilities of extending beyond mere religi ous factors to some of the more personal reasons for attending Indiana Central.

I. What first got you interested in the possibility of attending Indiana Central?
II. Have you ever been interested in the college, what factors influenced your decision to attend?

The results were somewhat surprising and interesting in the case of Indiana Central. The survey was conducted with this college in mind because it was recommended to the individual by a relative who had attended the college. Four per cent of the students listed this as the reason. Just under nine percent of the students attended the school brought to their attention by a representative of the Admissions Office. Of the students attending Indiana Central for religious reasons, fifteen percent were from Indiana Central students. This is a possible choice due to the fact that it was recommended to the individual by a relative who had attended the college.

Of somewhat greater interest, the student who previously had attended a Christian-oriented education as the prime reason for coming here, and eighty-two per cent said it had nothing whatsoever to do with their decision. It is difficult to say what significance should be given to this result. A cynical member of our faculty and student body would probably say that it only proves that atheists tend to take a course in psychology. If it is true that approximately eighty per cent of the student body has little interest in the religious aspects of campus life, one might not be surprised at the current disinterest in the chapel program — although the causes, one suspects, become more religiously indifferent.

To look briefly at the factors which apparently did lead two students to select Indiana Central, thirty per cent cited because it is a very different college. For reasons for coming here was the fact that I.C.C. is a relatively small school and that the campus is close to the community. Thirty percent of this was the second most important reason. Important factors were the proximity of the campus to the student's home, the financial assistance he was offered here, and the quality of instruction or existence of a special program such as nursing.

While the decision to come here because of the existence of a particular program or reputed quality of instruction is noteworthy, the number of students who attend because they are offered financial assistance is a fact that is not the less lamentable. It is probably an exaggeration to assume that we have an important "aspect of a person's college life that makes the campus worthwhile. It is also to say that the entire academic environment is of no consequence.

Our campus atmosphere — or lack thereof — is a product of an anemic social life, but derives to a large extent from haphazard administration and indifference. When we as a campus community are not able to create ideologies different from our own, we create an environment conducive to intellectual stagnation and thereby destroy the one ingredient necessary for a college faculty and student body.

Cure for the lack of social activity. It is a form of overemphasized perspective on fraternities and sororities or relaxed regulations govern ing the activities of these groups. The students insist. There are arguments to be heard on either side. Unfortunately, changing a few rules will do little to alter the overcrowded social life which is too frequently found here. Faculty, administrators, and students must all shoulder the responsibility for this state of affairs. What is needed is a change in regulations so much as a change in attitude.

Don't Miss It!

Here's One Last Word About Hope

draft - by Neta Everett
I was up at five-clay to go to a meeting in Roanoke, Virginia. It was interesting and I then set out for a day which we had set apart just to do what we could to help those in need.

It was the morning of March 6th, 1969. Dr. Niles Edith Ransburg, the director of the School for the Blind, was giving a speech at the Ransburg Auditorium, a large building on the campus of Florida State University. She was talking about her work as a teacher of the blind and about the obstacles that her students faced. Dr. Ransburg was a brilliant and inspiring woman, and her words touched me deeply.

After the speech, I had the chance to talk with her. She was very kind and approachable, and I found myself in conversation with her for quite a while. She told me about her life and her work, and I learned a lot from her. She was a true gentleman, and I feel grateful to have had the opportunity to meet her.

Afterwards, I went home to rest and prepare for the rest of the day. I cherished that moment, and I will always remember it as a special time in my life.
Hanover and Earlham Victories Needed To Secure Second Place In HCC Conference Standings

I would like to apologize to the football team, the coaches, and the student body for not being able to have a story on the two football games of the last two weeks. The reporter in charge of this part of sports failed to do his duties. He is no longer with the sports staff and we will make sure that this doesn't happen again.

Looking to upcoming games we can see the last two will be tough ones. Both the games are HCC games and two victories could pull us up to second place in the conference standings. Hanover and Earlham are two good sound ball teams. We need the fan to work harder, the fans to back them all the way, and for the cheerleaders to cheer. Everyone knows that our team's pass defense is poor. We need more hustle. If our line could dump the quarterback every time we could tolerate poor pass defense, but this doesn't happen. The best defense to have is an all round defense. When we get this, teams will have a tough time scoring on us. Then it could be a good season. Let's back our team and hope that they will shape up defensively and offensively and finish second in the conference.

Hound Harriers Downed By Trojans

The Taylor Trojans overcame an early Indiana Central hatter, and went on to defeat the Hounds by a score of 30 to 10 in the I.C.C. Cross Country Clash, also at Manchester College. The Trojans finished with 15 out of the top 20 places in the meet, and this deficit was too much for the Hounds to overtake.

Jacob fuerlich of Taylor won the 4-mile duel on the rain soaked Manchester course with a time of 20:37. Ray Schulte of the Trojans grabbed second place with a 21:21. Locking. Their lead was further reinforced by their second place finish in the first leg — Gary Hanover and Danny Walker, who finished fourth and seventh respectively. Ed Kinniman ran his best race of the year as he kicked him into the tenth-place finish. All three, Bill Keller, and Gary Bresdel also ran fine races.

Beta Theta Rides To A Victory

Beta Theta came through with the speed on the bike to win the yearly AFO bike race. The Beta's had it rapped up from the very beginning and went on to set a new record. Members of the team were Mark Whitman, Carl Herbst, Marlowe Mullen, and Joe Schenck. Beta Theta also received second place with their other team made up of members Larry Tucker, Jim Schmidt, Ed Ziegler, and Ron Young. There were many wrecks but no casualties. It was an exciting and well-rod race. Other teams that participated were AXX, Dailey (3rd floor), and Dailey-Bustin.

Hounds stop Anderson's runner but not their team.

When I was in High School there were many of my teachers who could not see the reason for athletics. They felt that athletes were a waste of time and a big expense in the school's budget. I feel that sports play an important part in the development and schooling of an individual. Let me explain why.

To succeed in athletics one must have self-discipline and plenty of a. A cross-country runner has to discipline himself to running 13.1 miles a day if he wants to suc-cceed. Also a wrestler must carve himself sometimes trying to get down to a certain weight and stay there. It might be good for me too and some of you could probably stand it, but it's not easy (try it). All the sports that one can think of have certain demanding things that a person must discipline himself to do — if he wants to be a good athlete.

All guys aren't natural athletes and this means that they must work and practice to improve. The best athlete is the one who sticks to his sport and gives it his all. He will have some downfalls along the way but he must pick himself up and go back at it.

For example our football team has been losing — as most people hope. It would be very easy for them to bow their heads and give up. But the sign of good athletes is when they keep fighting hard like our team does. It takes guts to play hard in the eyes of defeat.

It also takes a lot of guts to sit on the bench and back the team. Not everyone can be in the spotlight; there have to be the bench killers, too. Did you ever stop to think how they feel? These guys have to sit on the bench and still play with it all the way, take my hat off to these guys. They've got what it takes to be a man.

Something else developed in athletics is teamwork. Of course you always hear this. The cheerleaders yell it, the fans yell it, and the coaches yell it. It seems like teamwork. They work so they can't win. People have to get used to each other and learn to play together. It takes time and hard work but when it (teamwork) is accomplished, a team can shoot for the sky. One thing is for sure, if a team can't win it if it's made up of a bunch of individuals.

It has been a common thought that athletes are just dumb and you think this is true, I would like to try to change your mind. I think it might be a good idea to take a survey of the academic index of athletes. I think you might be surprised to see the results. Anyone who can apply himself to athletics can usually do the same in academics. Of course there are a few duds.

When a person succeeds he gets confidence. The more confidence he gets, the more he succeeds. This is another thing athletics can do for the individual. Athletics can make a person have faith in himself and in others. Without confidence, I doubt that anyone will go too far.

All these things help the individual in sports and also help to form a good individual for the life ahead. Self discipline is important to keep a person working towards a goal. He must stick to it if he ever hopes to reach that goal. He will encounter other people in life and he must be able to get along with them and able to work with them. He must have self-confidence first in himself and others in hopes he to live a prosperous life. With these things he will be on his way towards success.

What good are athletes? They prepare you for life and start you on the road to success. I believe athletes can be the start of a very successful and prosperous life.
