Frosh experience orientation

"When the introductory days are over, you should feel at home with all the new faces, places, schedules, and patterns." With these words from his welcome in the guide booklet, ICU President Gene E. Sease has summed up what Freshmen Orientation 1979 was all about.

Orientation took place from September 1st through the 4th, and encompassed a large range of activities. After the hectic experience of moving in, the new students were taken on campus tours while their parents attended an Open House at the home of the President. After saying goodbye to families, boyfriends and girlfriends, the Frosh met their faculty advisers. The Orientation kick off dinner that evening was hosted by President and Mrs. Sease. Later the new students were treated with several musical and comedy skits, performed by Indiana Central's "Not Ready for Prime Time Players" in a Saturday Night Live type show.

Sunday was another hectic day for the Frosh starting with a church service in Ransburg Auditorium. After the President's Reception at Nelson House, ICU's newest family members spent several hours playing, picnicking, and getting to know each other in the park. These activities included the Hound Hunt, which has to be experienced to be understood. The long day ended with a dance in Schwitzer Concourse, DJ'd by WNAP/WIBC man Dave Dugan. This was another opportunity for the new students to get to know each other better.

On Labor Day, the serious part of Orientation began as music, foreign language proficiency, and honors program testing took place. Workshops and interest sessions were also offered during the day, covering topics such as how to take tests, how to succeed in nursing, and getting involved in extra-curricular activities. A general information session was conducted later in the afternoon, and on Monday night, the movie "House Calls" was shown for the new students, complete with free food.

On Tuesday the Orientation activities came to an end with the advent of registration. The Frosh and upperclassmen acquainted themselves with one another in the dorms, the dining hall, and in registration line. First year nursing students met that afternoon, and then the entire student body participated in a picnic in the park. That evening students were able to enjoy themselves one last time before classes started by dancing their cares away in Schwitzer Concourse.

For the Freshmen, the Orientation weekend was an important one. Its purpose was to help them to get to know one another and to introduce them to the different facets of going to Indiana Central University. With Freshmen Orientation behind them, the new students can now look forward to an exciting, growing, and very enjoyable year.

Dorm Done In

Wilmore Hall as seen during the summer demolition.

New parking lot

Wilmore comes down

Wilmore Hall is shown above as it looked shortly after the wrecking ball: doors and windows open or removed, rooms and hallways stripped of anything of value, leaving only a shell. Wilmore Hall was replaced by North Hall, a new dormitory located north of the Kraner Memorial Library. Wilmore, named after A. C. Wilmore, a minister of the White River Conference, was built in 1928 at a cost of $55,000. It was known as New Hall until 1946. It is estimated that approximately 8,000 students have resided in Wilmore since it was completed. Cost of building a dorm comparable to Wilmore today would be about three million dollars. On this site in the future will be the new physical education complex, which will include a natatorium as well as other needed facilities.

IAC comes to Central

Indiana Artist — Craftsman, Inc., is "strengthening" its relationship with ICU this year. The Indiana Central Art Department will host IAC's four-yearly meetings on campus. According to Mr. Earl Snellenberger, IAC art professor, a "mutually beneficial arrangement has developed." Mr. Snellenberger, who also serves on the Board of Directors of IAC, says that the professional artists group has chosen the ICU campus as a favorable location for its meetings, that the university's students, faculty, and staff are invited to participate in the meetings.

"IAC pays all expenses — speaker's fees, transportation, room and board — for bringing experts in various areas of art to our campus," the art professor noted, "and our students benefit from it." The organization, which consists of artists from a variety of specializations — painting, printmaking, photography, ceramics, metals, tiles — has also been affiliated with Indiana Central in the past. Meetings have been conducted on campus and according to Mr. Snellenberger, the members seem to appreciate its central location in the state and therefore its accessibility to everyone.

The organization has been in existence for over 20 years and is perhaps best known as the sponsor of the 'annual Taibot Street Art Fair' in the city, one of the first events of its kind now popular throughout the United States. IAC's four meetings on campus will relate specifically to corresponding exhibits in the List Ransburg Art Gallery in Good Hall for "our mutual benefit. They have an exhibit to go with their program, and our students benefit from a program related to the exhibit," said Mr. Snellenberger.

All ICU students, faculty, and staff are invited free of charge to the IAC-sponsored meetings. Art majors and minors are expected to attend the meetings.

The first of these meetings will be September 15, beginning at 9:00 a.m. in room 219 of Good Hall. A calligraphy demonstration by Cynthia Kantner Eckert of the Indianapolis Art League and Juana Silcox, calligraphy artist, will begin at 10:30. This will correspond with the calligraphy exhibit in the Ransburg Gallery September 10-28.

The exhibit features Indiana calligraphy artists Cynthia Kantner Eckert, Janet Lawrence, G. H. Petty, Marilyn Price, Juana Silcox, and Jay Soule. Gallery hours are M-F 9:00 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will also be open evenings until 9 p.m. M-Th, September 10-13.

IAC's four meetings on campus will relate specifically to corresponding exhibits in the List Ransburg Art Gallery in Good Hall for "our mutual benefit. They have an exhibit to go with their program, and our students benefit from a program related to the exhibit," said Mr. Snellenberger.

All ICU students, faculty, and staff are invited free of charge to the IAC-sponsored meetings. Art majors and minors are expected to attend the meetings.
“Experience” credit bad policy

By Dr. Lynn R. Youngblood, Academic Dean

Some of you may have noticed in a Spring issue of U.S. News and World Report an article referring to the concept of colleges and universities awarding credit to individuals for life experiences. A more recent issue of The Wall Street Journal highlighted the same concern. The rationale for awarding credit for “living” is that some individuals, through their life experiences, are able to master subject matter that others of us learn in the classroom. The universities which recognize this type of credit have done so on the basis that some people, because of their life experiences, are able to gain knowledge without formal education. By allowing these people to gain credit for their life experiences, the universities are providing an opportunity for dialogue in a classroom setting among students and instructor. As I visited with alumni, I know that many of these alumni have been so positively influenced by their association with a faculty member and the opportunities for social intercourse with that individual. We must assure that these types of experiences will remain a part of the educational scene at ICU.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Welcome back!

Another boring welcome-back message, you say as you read this. You’re probably right, but hopefully you’ll read past these formalities to arrive at the guts of what I’m saying.

To be honest, I’m not very familiar with the chair from which I’m writing; that of Reflector editor. Our staff is organized slightly differently this year in that we have two coeditors leading the parade rather than an editor-in-chief and associate as in the recent past. We hope that this sharing of responsibilities will bring you a better REFLECTOR.

In summer brainstorming (though since pickin’s are slim between us, John Fetherolf, my cohort, uh...I mean coeditor and I tried to determine the direction of the REFLECTOR), we discussed having two coeditors leading the parade rather than an editor-in-chief and associate as in the recent past. We hope that this sharing of responsibilities will bring you a better REFLECTOR.

So, to get to the gist of the sales pitch, we need your help. Write letters to the editor when something concerns or interests you. Stop John or myself in the cafeteria and tell us about an event that is happening. Leave a note on a dorm spindle if you know of something exciting that will happen next month. Guileless. Slide a note under the REFLECTOR office door after dark, Be heard!

This column is a result of John’s and my headknocking. We realized that a staff-authored column (with opinions, great or groundless, and someone to be responsible for them) has not appeared as a regular feature of the REFLECTOR for several years. So, I will try to use this particular space to write about events, people, places, etc., that are, in my totally unbiased opinion, of interest to our readers.

If you think my remarks are painfully dull or unformed—please tell me. (Besides, it isn’t very often that you get an open invitation to abuse somebody—better take advantage! They’ve promised me the column for the year, so you might as well see that I write about something relevant.)

Oh, and before I forget, all letters to the editor must be signed legibly with the full and complete name of the author for legal purposes. However, if you request it, we can print the letter excluding the author’s name.

It is for you to open the locked gate,
It is for you to shake red apples down,
It is for you to halve them with your hands
That both may eat.

And now a word from our sponsor

Summer vacation is over, and the Indiana Central family has once more gathered on campus. Classes have begun and students are once again engaged in their studies, even though summer memories persist. New students, in the form of freshmen and transfers, join the rest of the campus population in pursuing their education. Exams will be administered, papers will be written, athletic and social functions will be attended and enjoyed, and many new friendships will be cultivated. All of these activities are a part of an active, growing process that can be termed "the college experience." ICU's student newspaper, the REFLECTOR, can and should be an integral part of "the college experience."

The goals of a publication such as this one are threefold. The first major purpose is to provide a vehicle for the student body's freedom of expression. In other words, the publications can be a voice of the students. Discontent of administrative policies, disappointment with student functions, and disagreement between social bodies can all be clearly and meaningfully expressed in the newspaper: Complaints, compliments, commentaries and questions. Using the publication in this method can be a most effective means of expressing individual and/or group needs.

Once these needs are expressed, then steps can be taken to fulfillment of the needs, which leads us to the second major purpose of the student newspaper: Establishment of a constructive, two-way communication link between the student body and the administration. Before fulfillment there must be awareness; student wishes must be effectively communicated to the target group. Only after this has been accomplished can action be taken. The REFLECTOR in a logical mode for this communication, as it is easily accessible to students, faculty, staff, and administration.

The third major purpose of the student newspaper is to keep the student aware of what is happening around him. This includes not only on-campus happenings, but also city, state, and national activities. Although emphasis will be placed on ICU events, it is the responsibility of this publication to report off-campus events that will directly or indirectly affect students. The student has a right to know what is happening to him, for him, around him, and why. This coverage should be honest, straightforward, unassuming, and completely free of all, unbalanced. If a faculty member is doing a lousy job, it should be reported in the newspaper. If an administrative body is seriously lacking in some way, then that should be reported. And if a group of students is acting in an immature and irresponsible way, then that also should be reported. This honest, unbiased coverage should extend from part-time students all the way to the President of the University.

All of these words are fine and dandy. But words mean nothing unless they are followed up by actions. The philosopher should practice what he preaches. For these goals to be attained, there must be an effort made, effort on the part of the students, effort on the part of the administration, and effort on the part of the REFLECTOR staff. Understanding must triumph over confusion, and constructive action must break the bonds of useless apathy. So I urge you, please do not be afraid to use the REFLECTOR in the methods described above. That is what the publication is for. If something bothers you, bother a writer, the editor. We will print anything, provided that it is in fairly good taste and contains your signature.

The power of the press is not to be overlooked. Our staff will make every effort to live and operate by the stated purposes of this student publication. The rest is up to you.

Mondale's Tied in At ICU

Did you know that United States Vice President Walter Mondale's mother taught at Indiana Central? The Vice President's father, Theodore, was born and raised in a small town in Minnesota. When he married into the Mondale family, his wife was taught piano at Indiana Central. The Vice President's son, Eric, attended Indiana Central and was active in student government. The Vice President has a close relationship with Indiana Central and is a strong supporter of the university.

During the evening of May 28, 1979, ICU business professor Douglas Dorland passed away. Stricken while participating in a church softball game, Dorland was 54. A native of Nebraska, Professor Dorland attended Nebraska Wesleyan University and the University of Nebraska before coming to Indiana Central in 1970. He served as Assistant Director of the Center for Industrial Relations in 1974, and did much work with the Small Business Administration. Mr. Dorland taught economics and management courses at Central, and was a favorite of many students. He is survived by his wife Brenda, and his three children Chad, Melanie, and Megan.

Contributions to the Douglas Dorland Memorial Fund may be made to the ICU Development Office.

Freshmen Welcomed

We here at the REFLECTOR would like to take this opportunity to sincerely welcome all of you new students to Indiana Central University. We hope that your Orientation experience was a learning and enjoyable one, and that you are now well established into the pattern of classes and studies.

Doubtless you have received many first impressions of what the college and campus community is like. You will receive many more as time goes on. There are many interesting experiences ahead of you. Brown County Day, Homecoming Week, Leap Week, and Flex all have the potential to be very good times for you. You will probably also participate in the unofficial extra-curricular activities such as panty-raids and snowball fights. You have made and will make many more new friends, relationships that will last for the rest of your lives. You may meet your future spouse here. Dorm activities will give you many hours of pleasure.

Unfortunately there are two sides to the coin. Like any institution, Indiana Central does have a few problems. We seem to have developed a bad case of student apathy over the past few years. Perhaps you have already noticed the large number of students who go home every weekend, thus the label, "suitcase college." The administration in their quest to achieve a good image and reputation for the University, sometimes overlooks the needs and desires of the students. The ICU social scene is not always what it should be. Some of your professors will seem to be more insistent that you memorize the information in a textbook, rather than actually learn it. And chances are you will get to know several upperclassmen who have pessimistic attitudes about going to school here.

If you are not already aware of these sore spots, you soon will be. But we do not mean to discourage you. College will more than likely be the most important period in your life up to this point. You will find many things you don't like here at Indiana Central, but you will also find many things you do like. And remember one thing: Your college experience will be as good as you make it. You can enjoy the good aspects of it, and you have the potential to change the bad aspects. We hope that the apathy bug has not bitten you yet. Life at Indiana Central can be an enjoyable experience, if you put forth the effort. Please do not be afraid to make that effort.

We wish you the best of everything in the coming year.
Dear Mom and Pop,

Well here it is, only a few days after I started going to school here. It seems a lot longer than that, because so much has happened to me already. I’ve made a lot of friends, most of the people here are pretty nice even the upperclassmen.

Orientation went OK, although sometimes it got kinda’ boring. There were a couple dances and picnics, and Saturday they had some musical and comedy stuff for us. On Monday we had to go to some workshops, and some of these were pretty dull. The dances were pretty fun, that’s how I met a lot of girls. There were an awful lot of people just standing around being wallflowers. I hope that all of the dances here are that good.

The dorm I’m living in, North Hall, is pretty nice I guess. It’s brand new and isn’t quite finished yet. There’s no air conditioning yet, and I have to go to another floor just to take a shower! I hate that, but somebody told me that for a while none of the showers were expected to be finished, and that we would have to go to another dorm or do without! That really fried my mind.

The food is not too bad, but they are starting to serve us the same stuff already. All of the upperclassmen say its terrible. I guess your cooking wasn’t so bad after all, Mom.

There’s some total foxes here, too. I wouldn’t mind a bit taking some of them out, but they probably wouldn’t even look at me. Besides, all the upper class guys are after the freshmen girls, so I really don’t have a chance.

Classes look like they are going to be really tough. In one class I had to write a paper already and in another one I have to read 50 pages out of a totally worthless textbook every night. What a bite! One of my professors will lock the door right at nine o’clock and if you’re a little bit late you can’t get in. I also have to go to convo twice a week, which is pretty beat.

Time to study. I’ll see you this weekend, and probably the weekend after that too. Say hi to Sis and the dog for me. (Is there a difference?) Just kidding!

Love, Tommie

PS I almost forgot to tell you about the clock tower. It’s really bad! I think it’s the only clock tower in the whole world that plays one song in 13 different keys.

Nalley Thinks Olympics
According to the July 24, 1979 column authored by Thomas Keating, in the Indianapolis Star, former ICU 1972 Winter Olympics. Impressed by Nalley's speed and strength, Becker encouraged him to try out for the 1980 squad, explaining to him that bobsled drivers needed very strong and very quick crew members to get the sled off the speedy start.

Before he was hospitalized, Nalley had already set the state bench press record in the 165-pound division by hoisting 410 pounds. His next goal was to break the world record in the 151-pound division by lifting 390 pounds. That was before he met Becker.

Since then, the ICU star has traveled to Lake Placid, New York for preliminary trials. Even though most of the other competitors had been of bobsleds before, Nalley was impressive. Of 60 men, he had the sixth best time in six separate 30-yard dashes, and had the second best time in six 30-yard dashes while pushing a sled. Naturally he was invited back to another tryout in September.

While at Indiana Central, Nalley was a four-year starter in the backfield for the Greyhound gridders. Breaking and setting many school records, he also set the all-time state rushing record, tallying over 3,500 yards. Not only did he excel in football, Nalley also ran 10.0 times in the 100 yard dash for the Hounds track squad.

If Dick Nalley succeeds in making the American team for the 1980 Winter Olympics, he will be one of the few ICU grads to ever make an olympic team. And in bobsledding of all things!
“Myriad of Activities”

FCA Plans For Coming Year

By Cindy Clendenon
Indiana Central’s Fellowship of Christian Athletes has recently been widening up for another year of activities. Since mid-August, 1978-79 members have been planning ways to enlarge and improve the ICU Fellowship. So far, prospects look good.

The coed group, which dwindled in 1976, shakily survived a revival last fall and winter, but registered only a dozen paid members. The count hopefully can be doubled, perhaps even tripled, if enough students respond this fall. In case of a poor student turn-out, however, the Fellowship may open its doors to non-students on the Southside, thus widening FCA’s ministry.

Tentative plans have also been made for separate men’s and women’s groups.

The purpose of FCA on the national and local scale is, in short, “To present the challenge of receiving Christ as Savior and Lord and serving him in all areas of life.” Interracial and interdenominational, FCA strives to strengthen the moral, mental, and spiritual fiber of athletes and coaches through discussion groups, Bible studies, special programs, guest speakers, rallies, conferences, clinics, banquets, and weekend retreats.

At the core of the national organization are the thousands of high school “huddles.” Through the previously mentioned activities (and especially through the monthly or bimonthly discussion sessions, films, and area programs), these groups provide an environment for developing fellowship, personal Christian growth, local service opportunities, and involvement in the Church.

And a myriad of other activities are offered through FCA, and all students are welcome to join. One need not be a national member to join the ICU Fellowship (although a national membership entitles the student to receive FCA’s bimonthly newsletter and provides him/her with several FCA privileges). Either way, FCA has much to offer.

New Women’s Coach Hired

Dawn O. Brown Race has been selected as the new women’s tennis and track coach at Indiana Central University.

Mrs. Brown has degrees from Eastern Illinois University in physical education and has participated in several women’s sports at the university level. She is coming to ICU from a coaching and teaching position at Charleston Junior High School in Charleston, Illinois.

Besides her coaching, Mrs. Brown will be teaching courses in physiology, kinesiology and activity classes in stunts and tumbling.

On August 9, Mrs. Brown left for Scarborough, Canada, where she coached the Indianapolis Peace Games Team in badminton. She is currently ranked among the leading badminton players in the country and has given exhibitions in the sport around the country.

Wide Range Of “Interest” Courses Offered At ICU

Courses ranging from Handwriting Analysis to Controlling Gas Reliefs will be offered by the Center for Continuing Education at Indiana Central University this fall.

Classes start in mid-September and run on flexible schedules through the Fall Semester.

The Fall 1979 Women’s Awa Series opens with a course that looks into the decreasing oil and natural gas supplies. September 11-October 16 (10:15 a.m.) Dr. Kenneth Borden, Associate Professor of Chemistry, will conduct this part of the growing program of lectures designed for women.

Another course in the Women’s Series to open on September 11 is: An Inquiry into Personal Spiritual Journeying. This class will look at how God finds us in our search for Him. Reverend Dave Owen, the new Campus Minister at ICU, will conduct this course that starts at 12:45 p.m.

Graphoanalysis (handwriting analysis) courses start September 11 at 6:30 p.m.

Cost for the course is $35—married couples may attend together for $65. This course is geared to looking at a person’s emotional makeup, social traits, and aptitudes through the study of handwriting.

John Maxwell will conduct a class in Starting and Running A Business, September 12-November 14. This class will determine major causes of business failures and what can be done to avoid them. Cost of the course, including all materials, is $145 per person. The introductory meeting will be on Wednesday, August 29 in Good Hall at 7 p.m.

A series entitled Adventures in Attitudes, starts September 19 at 6 p.m. Ken Partridge, Director of the Center for Continuing Education at ICU says, “Few programs have been as highly evaluated by the participants as this series.” A wide variety of subjects will be discussed by instructors, Tom Richardson and L. Neal Peary. Participants in the series will acquire skills that can be used to create positive attitudes in all aspects of their lives.

September 19 starts: a course open to people of all ages who want to improve their personal appearance. The Putting It All Together course will cost $35 and will include all materials. Ms. Rita Schwartz, a licensed cosmetologist at L.S. Ayres, will teach this 7:30 p.m. class.

Information for all of these courses may be obtained by calling the Center for Continuing Education, 1400 East Hanna Ave., phone 788-3260.
President Sease Announced

Dr. Gene E. Sease, President of Indiana Central University, has announced the names of eight students who will be Presidential Aides in the 1979-80 school year. They will be added to the continuing four Aides to bring the full complement to twelve.

Presidential Aides are carefully selected student leaders who assist the President with formal duties, host campus guests, and otherwise represent Dr. Sease at gatherings both on and off campus. Presidential Aides are chosen for their outstanding leadership and scholarship. To serve as a Presidential Aide is considered an honor.

Each year, a large number of students are nominated by present Aides, faculty, staff and other students. The President appoints a committee which screens the number to two for each available opening. President Sease then makes the final selection. There are six seniors, four juniors, and two sophomores among the group.

Dr. Sease commented on the importance of Aides to campus life, "The Aides are a significant and vital part of our administration. Not only do they provide valuable and effective outreach for our office, but their ideas, suggestions, and vitality bring a fresh and vigorous dimension to the campus."

Students chosen to serve this year include:

Seniors: Erhard Bell, a Chemistry/Biology major, is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Hans Bell of 2709 Marywood Dr., Indianapolis.

Dana Derbyshire, a Math/Business major, is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Lou E. Bales of 5112 Crawfordsville Rd., Indianapolis.

North Hall Nearly Finished

ICU's newest dormitory, North Hall, is up and is almost finished. All work on the new coeducational housing has been completed except for the installation of some shower facilities in the men's wing and all of the air-conditioning units. These tasks should be completed within the next few days.

Groundbreaking for the $2.5 million building took place October 25, 1978. The dorm is completely accessible to handicapped students, and is capable of housing 240 men and women. Its features include elevators, automatic doors, laundry facilities on each floor, lounge and recreational facilities. North Hall is located at the end of Otterbein Avenue, just north of Krannert Memorial Library.

ICU Welcomes New Faces to College Community

The new Chaplain at Indiana Central is Rev. David W. Owen, who most recently was pastor at the Jacobs Chapel United Methodist Church in New Albany, Indiana. Rev. Owen has also been pastor in Little York and Bedford, Indiana. He earned a bachelor of science degree in sociology from Indiana State University, and a master of divinity degree from the Theological Seminary in Wilmore, Kentucky. Rev.
